THE Class of '31 hopes, in publishing this book, to furnish every person who has lived on the campus in 1929-30 with an accurate and complete record of the events of an unusually interesting and happy college year. It is pleasant to have the whole story of your activities, with pictures of classmates, for reminiscent reference when school days are drifting farther and farther into the past. We hope, also, to perpetuate the traditions of our State and University by the wholesome Western tone—"Like fragrance of sage, after rain"—of the 1930 Wyo.

THE COWBOY CAMPUS

NO crowding close together of cramped, high buildings; no city factory smoke; no dim sunbeams, struggling through thick haze, are to be found on the Wyoming campus. Our plains are broad and wide; there is room to spare for a breath of clear, bright air between classes; and perhaps a snowdrift to clamber through for variety. Looking up we get a view of the Gym or Engineers' Hall, solidly etched against a background of sharp, snow-covered mountains, with purple shadows in a slanting sunlight. College days are ephemeral bubbles of busy hours, youthful thoughts, and happy friendships—they pass quickly; but every worn doorstep gives permanent testimony of their enduring value.

ADMINISTRATION

GREETINGS:

The 1930 Wyo is here. What a world of memories it awakens! The work and experiences of its making return in retrospect to its editors and managers, a worthy task, well done.

To its readers it gives an imperishable record of college life—its friendships, its escapades, its joys and disappointments. In after years it will recall the glad halcyon days of youth. May all to whom it comes enjoy its record of good will.

Al Quane

Standing—W. C. Bond, F. W. Geddes, J. M. Schwoob, President Crane, Fay E. Smith, W. M. Lynn, F. A. Holliday, J. A. Elliott.
Seated—P. J. Quealy, Governor Emerson, E. O. Fuller, Harriet T. Grieve, Mabelle G. Oviatt.

The Board of Trustees

THE BOARD of nine trustees appointed by the Governor, not more than three of whom may be residents of any one county of the state, together with the Governor, the President of the University and the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, as members ex-officio, constitutes the government of the University. The appointed trustees serve a term of six years.

Mrs. Morton, who is State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Governor Emerson and President Crane are the ex-officio members. Mr. Elliott, Mr. Geddes and Mr. Holliday are now in their second six-year terms. Mr. Quealy, in addition to his present term, has served two years of an unexpired term. The other members, Mrs. Oviatt, Mrs. Grieve, Mr. Schwoob, Mr. Bond and Mr. Lynn, are serving their original appointments.

Davis, Knight, Kidd, Burnstad, Hinds, Daly.
Redburn, Scott, Harkins, Corbett, Johnson, Hunton.

A. S. U. W. Executive Committee

WYOMING'S student government has been unusually successful. The executive board of this organization takes the full responsibility of sponsoring campus activities, intercollegiate contests, and the very important task of keeping out of debt. In the latter they have been singularly successful, which shows them to be one of the most active organizations on the campus—not the sort that lapses into a unique collection of inert deadwood.

The Registrar

THE work of the Registrar has come to be one of the most vital and efficient branches of the University administration. This office contains the personal college record of every student, which furnishes a wealth of material for statistical and guidance purposes.

REBA M. DAVIS, B.L.S.

The Librarian

THE Librarian, probably more than any other one person, affects the academic success of all the students. The efficient organization of the Library facilities and the wealth of material available are the fruits of the painstaking work of the Librarian and her able assistants.

JUSTUS F. SOULE, M.A.
Dean of the College of Liberal Arts.

The Dean of Men

NO one could be better fitted for the position of Dean of Men than the present incumbent, Dean Soule. Through years of service to the University he has become the friend and adviser of countless students with whom he has come in contact.

HELEN C. DUNNEWALD, M.A.,
Dean of Women.

LUELLA GALLIVER, M.A.,
Assistant Dean of Women.

MRS. LA VAUGHN P. GAGE,
Director, Hoyt Hall.

MAURINE HOLLO, B.A.,
Assistant Director, Merica Hall.

The Dean of Women

THE Dean of Women is largely responsible for the spirit of friendliness and cooperation manifest among the women students of the University. Through the work of the Dean and her corps of assistants a fine attempt is being made to hold the reputation of the University women at a high level.

The Division of Letters and Sciences

THE College of Liberal Arts, the largest college on the campus of the University of Wyoming, has a two-fold mission and opportunity. In the first place, and most important, is the opportunity to give to our students that broad training that will fit them for the various duties of life and of citizenship. This we try to do through the courses and training offered in the fourteen departments of the Division of Letters and Sciences and in the Divisions of Music and of Commerce. The aim is to so present and interpret the Arts and Sciences, the History, Philosophy and Literature of the world, past and present, that the young people of Wyoming shall be adequately equipped to meet the various responsibilities of life with that ability and skill which will assure them a reasonable degree of success.

In the second place, through a wise selection of fields of major interests, this College hopes to enable each student to find the particular direction in which he can best pursue further study and thus attain to a really comprehensive scholarship in the lines most suited to his interests and abilities. If an adequate foundation has been laid for such work the ambitious student will find ever-increasing pleasure and gratification in further study and work in his chosen field.

This, in brief, is the work of the College of Liberal Arts, and to this work we invite the young people of Wyoming.

Dean of the Law School and Professor of Law.

The Law School

THE Law School of the University of Wyoming is the only law school in the state. Since its organization in 1920 it has always been a school of recognized high standing.

In 1923 it was admitted to the Association of American Law Schools and was given a Class A rating by the American Bar Association. Only about thirty per cent of the law schools in the United States have sufficiently high standards to be eligible to membership in and the approval of these associations.

A constant effort has been made to improve the facilities in the Law School, so that now there are available a well-conducted library reading room and moot court room, an ample stack room, adequate class rooms, and a suite of faculty and administration offices. The number of volumes in the law school library is now in excess of ten thousand, which volumes include practically all of the standard sets of law books for which students have any use. Systematic additions to the library are being made constantly.

The minimum course is the standard five-year course given in all of the better law schools, and consists of at least two years of pre-legal study, followed by three years of professional law study. Elective six-year courses are available to students who wish to secure academic degrees in Liberal Arts, or Business Administration in addition to the professional Bachelor of Laws degree.

The law course is designed to prepare students for the practice of law in any state in the country, and graduates are eligible to take the examinations for admission to the bar in any state. In spite of increasing enrollment, the law school is still small enough so that individual attention can be given to all students.

The College of Agriculture

IT has been a good year for the Agricultural College. The stock-judging team surpassed all previous records for Wyoming teams in the contest at the International Livestock Exposition at Chicago. Many members of the graduating class have been granted fellowships in other universities, where they will have a chance to do graduate work. The members of the faculty have been elected to important offices of the national societies in their special fields of work, and they have published books and articles that have attracted national attention. The general scholarship of students, both in Agriculture and Home Economics, has never been higher. The graduates of the last few years are making themselves felt in positions of leadership in this and other states.

Throughout the state more and more young people of Wyoming are coming to realize that a course in Agriculture or Home Economics in our own University is the best possible preparation for a useful and happy life.

The College of Engineering

THE goal of the training in the Engineering College is the graduation of students whose instruction has been such that they can compete successfully with the graduates of the best engineering colleges of the country, and who at the same time will become trusted leaders in their different communities by reason of the fine character and high ideals developed in part at the University of Wyoming.

The College consists at present of divisions in each of the four main branches of engineering, civil, electrical, mechanical and mining. In each of these divisions the underlying idea of the curricula is a thorough training in fundamental subjects. No special work is given for degrees in restricted fields for which a student may or may not be fitted or have a permanent interest. The basic work done will, however, enable a student to enter any of several particular lines after getting into practice and knowing better what life work to follow.

In the past the College has graduated many men who are today prominent in their work and who hold positions of responsibility. It hopes its present student body will have at least as great success and in greater numbers than ever before.

The College of Education

THE function of the College of Education is to train students for the profession of teaching. Through its various curricula students may prepare to become teachers or supervisors in the elementary schools, teachers or supervisors in rural schools, supervisors of music, teachers of academic, and vocational subjects in high schools, and directors of Physical Education. An excellent program of graduate work is offered for superintendents and principals. Due to the growth and development of the College of Education, a large percentage of the teachers and administrators in the state are either graduates of the University of Wyoming or are pursuing advanced work in the summer session. Students in the University who are desirous of entering a vocation where opportunity for service is practically unlimited, yet insures to one who is thoroughly prepared a satisfactory living wage, should give consideration to the profession of teaching.

The Division of Music

GEORGE EDWIN KNAPP
Director of the Division of Music.

ROGER C. FRISBIE, B.Mus.,
Professor in Piano, Organ, and Theory.

DAISY WHARTON,
Instructor in Violin.

MABEL BABINGTON,
Instructor in Piano.

HELEN H. HYLTON, B.M.,
Instructor in Piano.

FRANCELIA FRENCH,
Instructor in Public School Music.

HARRY W. THOMPSON,
Director, R. O. T. C. Band and Instructor in Band Instruments.

A three-fold curriculum is provided by the Division of Music fitting students in proficiency as teacher, theorist, or professional musician. This division is largely responsible for the extra-curricular cultural advantages offered on the campus.

The Division of Commerce

E. DEANE HUNTON, M.B.A.
Head of the Division of Commerce.

FOREST R. HALL, B.S., M.S., Assistant Professor.

ROSA COLEGROVE, B.A.,
Instructor.

WALTER E. DANIELS, B.A.,
Instructor.

L. O. SMITH, B.S.,
Instructor.

The Division of Commerce is one of the most rapidly growing departments in the University, both in the number of students enrolled and the increase in the number of courses offered.

From an early start confined to stenography and bookkeeping, the division has expanded its curriculum to include such branches as accounting, business law, insurance and business administration. The department fits its students for immediate participation in some form of business life.

MRS. CLARA BOWMAN, B.A.
Director of Correspondence Study

The Division of Correspondence Study

For those people who desire courses in college subjects, yet have not the means or the time to engage in residence study, this division offers such work through extension courses. Increasingly large numbers are being enrolled in this division, which is a decided asset to those benefiting therefrom.

A. E. BOWMAN, B.S.,
Director of Extension Division.

The Extension Division

The Extension Division is conducted to give practical advice and instruction in the fields of Home Economics and Agriculture to the people throughout the state. The latest and most efficient methods in these important fields are taught by a highly trained group of Extension specialists.

JOHN "CHOPPY" RHODES,
Director of Athletics.

ATHLETICS

PRESENTING the new director of athletics at the University of Wyoming, Coach John "Choppy" Rhodes. Selected by the board of directors as the man most eminently suited for the post, Coach Rhodes comes to Wyoming this fall to officially take over the reins in his new position.

With an enviable reputation of both athletics and scholarship at the University of Nebraska, his Alma Mater, where he earned varsity letters in football, baseball and track, and was a member of the senior honorary scholastic society, "Choppy" Rhodes made his first appearance on the Cowboy campus shortly after his appointment to assume charge of the spring football workout. Success in the short practice period was marked, and the Cowboy football squad should make a fine record this fall.

Coach Rhodes has been head freshman and assistant varsity football mentor at the Cornhusker institution since his graduation, and in addition to his expert guidance on the gridiron, he piloted the Nebraska baseball team to a conference championship last spring. Playing end and fullback on the Husker eleven, he gained the All-American honor roll, and his ability on the track made him one of Nebraska's outstanding cinder artists.

With this fine record behind him, and a pleasing personality, Coach Rhodes should make a success in his new position. He will have as his chief assistants Charles "Chuck" Coughlin, stellar Cowboy basketball guard, assistant varsity basketball and freshman line coach; Willard Witte, star University of Nebraska football and basketball player, head basketball and freshman coach, and Ray Richards, one of Nebraska's best known football men, assistant varsity football and head wrestling coach.

TO A MAN

NOW he has gone! His mortal hand has failed
To guide our strength between the wrong and right,
To mold our lives through God, his strength and light.
A boy, a man, a friend to us unveiled.
He came in time of need for strength and railed
The ground. He stood his ground; he fought his fight,
He raised the school with love, his living might;
He worked his will and left, a man well hailed.
To me, a home-sick boy, he helped with cheer
And made my place seem bright instead of dark;
To me, a home-sick boy, he helped with cheer
A bounding love for all, a heart as clear.
His living hand by faith has set a mark
That little men cannot deface through time.

A. Jack Richards.

CLASSES

SENIORS

THE SENIOR CLASS

The Senior Class of 1930 has ended its four short years of life on the campus of the University of Wyoming. During this time it has been a very outstanding one, its members having been prominent in all campus activities. The Class of 1930 has been represented beyond the usual in athletics, dramatics, debate and all other University functions, and in addition to this it has maintained a high scholastic average. The record thus attained should be an inspiration for future generations of Wyoming students.

The absence of the Class of 1930 will be greatly felt on the campus, but the knowledge that its members are soaring to even higher peaks of accomplishment in their future lives will serve to banish these regrets. And with this thought in mind, every one joins in wishing the Seniors the best that the world has to offer in success and happiness.

Symbolic

MY hopes are as winged shafts
Fitted into a gilded bow.
I alone can draw the string
And let the arrows go.

There may be many things
Influence the aim I've taken
Pray, steady my hand so it can't be
From its true course shaken.

Always, always the goal depends
On the arm that draws the string.
Funny how life's success weigh
With the force behind the thing.

JUNIORS

THE JUNIOR CLASS

The Class of '31, in completing its Junior year, looks back on a period of three brief but eventful years of University life, each year of which has marked additional feats of accomplishment, new honors gained, and a closer organization and fellowship effected among its members.

The two years as underclassmen served as a formative period, from which the class emerged in the fall of '29 to take a place of eminence on the Cowboy campus. Already its members, as individuals, had attained signal honors as journalists, dramatists, debaters, athletes, and scholars, one of our number being honored as a Rhodes Scholar. The year of 1929 and 1930 saw the advent of a class consciousness which has resulted in a train of accomplishments. The Junior Prom was staged with enhanced excellence, the "1930 Wyo" was published, and the Wyo Ball originated.

As it completes its Junior year the Class of '31 feels amply talented and capable of assuming the roles of Seniors for the coming year.

SOPHOMORES

THE SOPHOMORE CLASS

The Class of '32 showed in its first week on the campus that it had distinctions other than being the largest in the history of the University when it painted the "W" with a bit more ease and dispatch than it had ever been done before. It capped a brilliant first year by originating and staging the first annual Freshman Bust-Out, described by Coach Corbett as the first real exhibition of class spirit he had ever seen on the campus. This year the class assumed the name Sophomores in order to present the annual Sophomore Powder River Ball. Aside from this important function it has found time to provide more than its share of athletes and scholars, as well as dominate the University in general.

THE FRESHMAN CLASS

The Freshman Class of this year is a large one and has been quite outstanding since it made its appearance on the campus last September. The class started the year enthusiastically by white-washing the "W" in a manner that fittingly showed their power and determination. In the many contests against the Sophomores, and in the activities of the class in general, the Freshmen not only exhibited their power, but also pep and organization.

Members of the Class of '33 are leaders in many fields of activity, such as dramatics, forensics, and literary work. Several of Wyoming's most promising athletes are numbered among the members of this class. The Freshman football team, under the tutelage of Coach Ed Miller was a strong aggregation, and made a fine showing in all of their games.

COLLEGE SPRING

ALL gentle delicious winds bring us more and more birds singing in the trees ;
And every drop of the finely sifted rain paints fresher and fresher green on the grass.
I rather like playing in the open air with ants and bees
Than sitting absent-mindedly in the sleepy and dreamy class !

SUMMER SCHOOL

DEAN C. R. MAXWELL, M.A.
Director of Summer Session

SUMMER SESSION 1929

ONE of the outstanding features of the summer quarter at the University of Wyoming was the growth and development of activities sponsored by the summer division of the Associated Students. The officers elected by the student body were all outstanding people who had devoted much time and thought to ways and means of making the summer session activities attractive to the student body.

Among the outstanding features were the semi-weekly publication of the Branding Iron, the various types of athletic activities, social functions, such as dancing, parties, and beefsteak fries, and the dramatic activities which were developed in the recent sessions.

The promotion of a section for the summer session in the Wyo was the latest evidence of progress. The exceptional growth of the session, both in numbers and in quality of the student body, can be traced, to a considerable degree, to the loyal cooperation of the student organizations.

Dean Maxwell has been an untiring worker for the betterment of the institution. Chiefly due to his efforts, the enrollment of 1929 was more than three times that of 1920.

WYO BEAUTY CONTEST

FOLLOWING the precedent set by the Wyo for the last several years, the 1930 Staff conducted a Wyo Beauty Contest, the winners being selected by a nationally recognized artist. This year the editor was fortunate in securing John Held, Jr., famed for his caricatures of the younger generation, to select Wyoming's fairest coeds. Of the thirty-two pictures sent to him, Mr. Held picked as the three most beautiful, in order of placing, Miss Helen Hylton, Miss Elvira Agnew and Miss Carol Corbin. The 1930 Wyo Staff originated the distinctive Wyo Ball, which was held February 28th. At this function the winners were announced by President Crane, who graciously consented to be master of ceremonies.

Popularity Contest

EVERY year the "Wyo" staff sponsors a popularity contest, which is conducted through the various social organizations on the campus. Each group enters a candidate, and votes are counted according to the number of "Wyo's" sold by the members of that group. Thus the candidate of the organization selling the largest number of yearbooks wins the contest, and is declared the most popular coed on the Cowboy range.

PRAELUDIUM AMORIS

“THE moon’s a silver bow tonight, and I Could warble on for hours like that about
The charms of night, and other things. But these Poetic monologues are hard to stand.
Be good to me and I’ll not talk that way.”

“And yet you said we lived in poetry.”

“And then I said we did not live on poems.
You see, a pale, thin lyric fails to click
With stars and mountain zephyrs, I prefer
To talk of you and why like to poke
Things in my mind and drop rocks in the wheels
And note the peculiar noises that come out.”

“You used to like to talk about yourself.
You said so, once, and then raved on for hours.”

“I don’t remember ever saying that,
Although a man is irresponsible.
I guess, or quite insane, when talking with
A girl. He never ought to do it twice.”

“Is that the way I make you feel? I won’t.
You can’t kiss me because you say I make
You crazy—by example, I suppose.
Besides, you know, I simply am not cheap.”

“Oh, all right. Still, I wouldn’t mention pay
For something I thought priceless. What I do
I do because I really like you. That Is all that I can say—unless your price—”

“Would you respect me just as much if I Had let you kiss me right away? Or had Two days ago?”

“Of course. I loved you then.”

“No, don’t. I . . . Well . . .”

—By Paul Scott,

JUNIOR PROM COMMITTEE

Larsen, Hufsmith, Rice, Yeager, England,
Joyce, Burrage, Hansen, Burleson, Blake, Spalding, Bender

October 4—The Coed Ball opened the social season for the University of Wyoming. This ball furnishes an opportunity for the girls to become acquainted with each other. It is well attended by all the campus coeds.

October 11—The "Ag Dance," sponsored by the Ag Club, is one of the unique functions of the Fall quarter. It is held annually in the hay-loft of the barn at the University Stock Farm. A conglomerate mixture of cider, doughnuts and hay is enjoyed by all.

October 26—The Homecoming Dance culminates the program for the Homecoming weekend. This function, which ranks highest in attendance of any dance held during the entire year, boasts the presence of faculty, grads, undergrads, frosh, and what have you. However, it might be well to mention that the alumni, both in spirit and numbers, were the dominant element of the affair.

November 22—The Engineers' Ball, which heretofore has been held during the Winter quarter, was moved ahead to furnish a special treat earlier in the year. This was the first formal on the 1929-30 social calendar. An added attraction, furnished by the lawyers, disturbed the otherwise stately equilibrium of the party.

QUEEN OF WYO BALL

January 17—The Seniors, in staging their annual Black and White Ball, proved that their four years' practice as social entertainers leads to the sponsoring of one of the best Black and White Balls ever held on this campus.

January 31—The Inter-Fraternity Ball, which was sponsored and managed by the Inter-Fraternity Council, was one of the best attended social functions of the season.

February 7—The Cadet Ball of former years was held this year as the Military Ball. The affair proved to be the biggest social success of the Winter quarter. It was held in the University gymnasium and, in addition to being attended by an unusually large number of University students, saw many alumni from Laramie and Cheyenne, representatives of Fort Warren, and a delegation of over twenty from the Colorado Agricultural College.

February 14—The coed Costume Ball, staged under the auspices of the A. W. S., offers a diversion in the way of social entertainment for the women students. Stunts were presented by the different coed organizations, first place being awarded to Delta Delta Delta. Prizes were offered for the most beautiful and the most clever costumes. Lillian England and Lucille Love received the honor for the former, while Geraldine Truitt and Alice Hocker carried off the prize for the latter.

QUEEN OF ENGINEERS' BALL.

February 28—The Wyo Ball was something new and original in the way of social activity. It was sponsored by the 1930 Wyo staff. At this time the winners of the Wyo beauty contest were announced as well as the successful contenders in the popularity contest.

March 7—The Pan-Hellenic Formal, the sister function to the Inter-Fraternity Ball, ranks as one of the stellar festivities of the year.

April 4—The A. W. S. Spring Formal opened the social calendar for the Spring Quarter. At this time the announcement of the new A. W. S. officers was made by the former president.

April 25—The Powder River Ball is unquestionably the most hilarious struggle of the year. Gayly bedecked in cowboy costume, etc., recalling reminiscences of former days, the students vie with each other as to who can represent the supposedly toughest individual on the floor.

May 9—The Junior Prom of 1930 was, without a doubt, the most elegant entrancing fete ever held at the University of Wyoming!

May 16—The Iron Skull Skid was held as usual among decorations or surroundings of such ominous things as tombstones, skeletons and weird lighting effects. It commands attention because of its novelty. At this time the pledges for membership in Iron Skull are announced.

CARRYING THE HEIR

MUSIC

UNIVERSITY ORCHESTRA

THE UNIVERSITY ORCHESTRA has had its most successful season this year. There are about thirty-six members. Performances reached such a high state of excellence that it was sent on a trip, giving concerts in Kemmerer, Evanston, Lyman, Green River and Rawlins, and in Cheyenne. It also appeared in one formal concert in the Little Theatre in the fall and on one of the Music Week programs in April, as well as a concert for the Laramie High School in the spring.

Mr. Frisbie is conductor and Mrs. Alice Ames, pianist. The personnel is as follows:

First violin: Daisy Wharton, concertmaster; Mrs. R. C. Frisbie, Henri Longpre, John Sillasen, Mrs. Harry Tatham, Frank Kohn, Arthur Burckert, Arthur Mickey, Reese Achenbach.

Second violin: Mary Ford, Louis Knifong, Florence Godard, Ruth Westover, Vincent Bowles, Norville Fluckiger, Carl Olson.

Cello: Margaret Burckert, Shirlee Slade, Clarence Davis.

Double Bass: Catherine Maloney, August Koerting.

Flute: Roy Sandburg.

Clarinet: Louis Sillasen, Cecil Centlivere, Beatrice Call.

Bassoon: Norris Embree.

First Trumpet: Harry Thompson.

Second Trumpet: Ruth Early, Alvin Fluckiger, Henry Parsons.

French Horn: Chester Teeple, P. J. Quealy, Jr.

Trombone: James Simonton, Paul Garman, Arthur Peterson.

Baritone Horn: Paul Scharman.

Tuba: Louis Duhig.

Tympani: Fred Reed.

Traps: Hampton Smith, Raymond Frazer.

Piano: Alice Ames.

UNIVERSITY CHORUS

THE UNIVERSITY CHORUS is composed of about one hundred students and townpeople. This year three performances have been given—the annual “Messiah,” on December 15th; a concert in Music Week, on April 29th, and the annual Spring Concert, on June 9th.

Any person with some experience in part-singing may join the chorus. Rehearsals are held each Tuesday evening, at 7:15. Mr. Knapp is conductor and Miss Hilton and Miss Babington, accompanists.

The following sang in “The Messiah,” December 15th, 1929:

WILLIAM C. HOLLAND
Editor

THE 1930 WYO

THE WYO should be a tangible record of the ambitions, achievements and ideals of the students of the University of Wyoming. With this idea constantly in mind the 1930 Wyo staff has endeavored to create a volume worthy of the institution whose activities it chronicles. A few changes have been made in the content usually found in the Wyo, and we hope that the substitution of the more unusual in content and make-up will please its readers. Although no attempt has been made to carry a definite theme throughout the book, we have in some measure portrayed, on the opening pages, the progress of industry and achievement in Wyoming—one of the last of the states to retain a vestige of the Old West. As editor, I am indebted to Dr. Grace Raymond Hebard for a large share of the material and suggestions for this section.

The editing of the Wyo would indeed be an arduous if not impossible task were it not for a loyal and efficient staff. I wish to express my deepest gratitude to the members of the staff, all of whom have cheerfully contributed their time and effort in publishing the book. The creation of the volume itself, and the associations with those whom I have come in contact in editing the Wyo, have been a pleasure. The editorship of the 1930 Wyo has been more than a duty and a task, it has been a privilege.

WILLIAM C. HOLLAND.

AS business manager of the 1930 Wyo, I wish to thank the members of the staff for their whole-hearted assistance in the financing of this publication. I realize that this has at times meant considerable effort on not too pleasant work, and I am deeply grateful.

To the reader I wish keen enjoyment of the Wyo. The editorial staff has given you a record of the pleasant memories of the college year—your college year—of 1929-30. We hope that this product of our efforts will serve as a stimulus to you to continue as an important factor in the promotion of noteworthy activities, and that you will always take pride in aiding the advancement of the University of Wyoming.

BRANDING IRON

THE BRANDING IRON, the official weekly publication of the Associated Students of the University of Wyoming, attempts to publish the news of the Cowboy campus. It was edited during the past year by Elmer E. Johnson, who served his second term in this capacity. Theodore Burnstad was manager.

This year a far larger number of students than usual sought positions on the staff, and several of these did very creditable work. This evidence of the increased interest in journalism gives promise of better Branding Irons in succeeding years.

Several times during the year individuals on the staff assumed the work of editing special issues. Such editions were generally rated as the best of the year. One of the most outstanding of these was the one edited by Gene Cross, which was acknowledged as one of the best issues of the Branding Iron during 1929-1930. The Curling Iron, a special edition featuring the Wyoming coeds, was capably edited by Toots Kennedy. Among the most novel of the Branding Irons is the one known as the Freshman Edition. Victor Rizzi, editor, assisted by a staff of Freshmen, proved conclusively in this issue that the Frosh are accomplished in the journalistic game, notwithstanding the green sheet on which their edition was published.

As a result of distinguished work on the Branding Iron, several staff members are eligible for Blue Pencil, honorary journalistic organization. Those attaining this honor are: Lewis Bates, Fred Hufsmith, Gene Cross, Victor Rizzi, Catherine Howell, Gerald Gibson, Toots Kennedy, R. E. Rennard and Hazel Krieg.

QUILL MAGAZINE

WYOMING QUILL is published during the spring quarter of each year by Thorn Rune of American College Quill Club. This year's issue is especially commendable for the excellent variety of work and the literary finish which characterizes each selection. The magazine features Olga Moore Arnold's popular story, "The Tensleep Way," and one of Ted Olsen's well-known poems, "The Passion Play." Articles and stories by Molly Peacock, Louise Rhode, Thomas Barratt, Marion Rice, Bertha Ashley and Dorothy King are all deserving of much favorable criticism. Poems of unusual merit by Ernest Newton appear throughout the magazine.

Student Directory

The University Directory was published during the fall quarter by A. W. S., with Arleen Larsen as editor. The Directory was of more than usual service this year because of its appearance so early in the year. Because of its complete classification of all students and faculty members the Directory is a valuable asset to all members of the student body and faculty. A complete organization classification is an important feature of the Directory.

THE DEBATE TEAM

Louise Scott, Harold Scott, Alice Ellen Ford, Winston Howard.

Varsity Debate

THE 1930 Varsity Debate season was an extremely busy one. There were more debates held both at home and on trips than in previous years, and both the men's and women's squads had more members than usual. Mr. Mallory was in charge of the men's squad and Miss Phelan was in charge of the women's squad. Mr. Stevens assisted both with the men and with the preparation of one of the women's teams. The system of having a number of home-and-home debates as well as the long trips at the end of the season has resulted in the use of many more individuals in debates during the term, producing a stronger and more experienced squad.

The debates held at Laramie between January and April were as follows: Nebraska Normal School (mixed team debate), Missouri University, Kansas Agricultural College (mixed team), Wheaton College, Illinois (mixed team), University of Southern California, Colorado Agricultural College (mixed team debate), Willamette University, College of Puget Sound, University of Oregon, Utah University, Utah Agricultural College, and the freshmen boys of Colorado University.

Two local trips were made to near-by schools; one to the University of Colorado and one to Colorado Agricultural College.

The women's debate team—Alice Ellen Ford and Louise Scott—accompanied by Miss Josephine Phelan, started March 21 on an extensive trip through Utah, Nevada and California. The schools met on this trip were: University of Utah, University of Nevada, College of the Pacific at Stockton, California; University of California, University of Southern California, Occidental College, Southwestern University and Brigham Young University.

The men's debate team—Winston Howard and Harold Scott—accompanied by Mr. Louis Mallory, made an even more extensive trip through the southeast. The schools met on this trip were: Kansas Agricultural College, Washburn College, Kansas University, University of Missouri, Washington University at St. Louis, St. Louis University, Loyola University, University of Louisiana, Southwestern Louisiana Institute and Baylor University.

There were comparatively few decision debates during the season, and of the few a number were audience decisions. The Cowboy debaters won and lost about an equal number.

The men and women out for debate all showed considerable forensic ability, enabling the coaches to use an unusually high percentage of the squads in varsity debates.

The women were all used during the season in one or more debates, so that those participating in intercollegiate debates were as follows: Rachel Achenbach, Bertha Ashley, Olive Cushing, Alice Ellen Ford, Elsie Gronlund, Lomila McClenaghan, Molly Peacock, Louise Scott and Meda Strong. As none of these girls are graduating this year, the prospects for a strong team next year are exceptionally good.

Ten men participated in intercollegiate debates during the season. They were: Byron Bender, Joe Budd, Lawrence Burley, Eugene Cross, Norris Embree, Winston Howard, Archie McClintock, Harold Scott, Paul Scott and Stanley Trachta.

Owing to the extensive debate season a number of the men and women were initiated into Delta Sigma Rho, national honorary debating fraternity.

ORATORY

DURING the past year, due to the efforts of Mr. Louis Mallory, an increased emphasis has been put upon oratory. Byron Bender represented the University of Wyoming at the Rocky Mountain Oratorical Contest held in Salt Lake City, April 26. The Wyoming representative placed fourth in the competition.

INTRA-MURAL DEBATE

Intramural debate holds a prominent place among the forensic activities on the Wyoming campus, since it affords an attractive field of competition and also is a valuable means of developing varsity material. In 1929 two handsome trophies were presented to the University by Wyoming's United States senators, to be used as awards to the winning groups in intramural debate. The cup for the men's division is the gift of the late Senator Francis E. Warren, while the one for the women's was given by Senator John B. Kendrick.

This year Sigma Nu won the Warren cup for the second time. The members of the winning team were Percy Cooper, Byron Bender, Lawrence Burley and Archie McClintock. The Varsity Villagers were the successful contenders for the Kendrick cup.

STOCK JUDGING

Winters, Greaser, Hale, Coach Wheeler, Cameron, Simpers, Duncan, Kendrick.

International Stock Judging Team, 1929

THIS team, composed of Seniors and Juniors of the Agricultural College, left Laramie the second of November, after a very successful season, and returned the sixth of December. The team helped to exhibit the stock from the University at the Ak Sar Ben at Omaha, at the Kansas National Stock Show, at Wichita, and at the American Royal at Kansas City.

Practice judging work was done at the Ak Sar Ben show, the Kansas State Agricultural College at Manhattan, Kansas; Iowa State College at Ames, Iowa; Minnesota State Agricultural College at Minneapolis, Minnesota; the Boulder Bridge Farms at Minneapolis, Minnesota, and Earl Brown's Belgian Farms at Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Three intercollegiate contests were entered: the Kansas National at Wichita, the American Royal at Kansas City and the International at Chicago. The team did very well in all of the contests. At the International they placed fifth out of twenty-one teams from all parts of the United States and Canada.

Morris Simpers, a Junior, from Cody, was high-point man for Wyoming at the Kansas National contests. Archie Hale was high man of the team at the American Royal and the International contests. He placed eleventh in the International out of 105 contestants.

The trip was made by automobile and many places of much interest were visited, including a number of Universities, colleges and noted stock farms.

Coach Wheeler, McMillan, Fletcher, Pallesen.
Turner, O'Reilly, Parmalee, Josendal.

Western National Stock Judging Team

THE WYOMING JUNIOR STOCK JUDGING TEAM turned in a very creditable exhibition of their prowess at the annual Western National Live Stock Show, which was held in Denver the last week in January. Wyoming placed third in the competition, the only teams placing ahead of them being Kansas and Nebraska. The Wyoming team placed first in judging hogs, and Jasper Pallesen was high-point man in this contest. In addition to the judging done, the members of the Wyoming team assisted in exhibiting University of Wyoming stock, which also carried away honors.

Much credit is due S. S. Wheeler for his efforts in coaching the team. The members composing the team were: F. L. O'Reilly, Jasper Pallesen, John Turner, Harry McMillan, Harold Josendal, William Fletcher and Tom Parmalee.

HERITAGE

RAOUL, the troubadour, made gusty sighs
And caused in ladies' hearts the tender pain
Of hopeless love, picked flowerets in the lane,
And loved Germaine, an angel in disguise.
Raoul had sung that "true love never dies,"
But found one night that even fair Germaine,
Like some sick cow, all damp and staring in the rain,
Would say, "I love," and bat such bulging eyes.

Raoul is dead; his mournful, amorous songs
And tales with which he used to advertise
The fame of knights who righted virgins' wrongs
Are almost less than dust. But one belongs
To boys who whisper, "True love never dies,"
But hear the far-off purr of temple gongs.

—Paul Scott.

Wheatland--State Champions--1930

COMING to the tournament as top-heavy favorites to cop the title, the Wheatland Bulldogs got away to a rather slow start, but came through in the final contests in great style to win their second successive state championship. The Bulldogs had gathered 23 consecutive victories in play before the tournament, and only suffered one setback during their quest for titular honors when the fighting Casper Mustangs unexpectedly rolled them under a 31-to-24 score in a mid-tourney game. Winning from Lingle, 26 to 22, in the finals, the Wheatland team immediately left for the national tournament at Chicago, where they distinguished themselves by winning fourth place in competition against the strongest high school quintets in the country.

BREAKING all records, 53 basketball teams entered the High School Tournament this year. One hundred and six games were played, and because of the great number of teams entered, play during the first few days started almost at sunup and lasted straight through until midnight. Three thousand seven hundred and thirty-six points were scored during the games, with 34 points established as the average total score per contest, and 17 points as the average team score. Lingle was not forced to play any team more than once in winning the class "B" honors, while Lyman, in class "C," played three games with Cokeville, and Veteran, in class "D," met Manderson in three contests before the supremacy could be decided.

MILITARY

MAJOR BEVERLY C. DALY

University of Wyoming R. O. T. C.

THE CADET CORPS is one of the oldest organizations on the campus, dating from 1891, when a regular officer was first detailed to the University as professor of military science and tactics. From the handful of cadets who wrestled with "present arms" and "squads east" in that dim past the Corps has grown until it now numbers over three hundred men, consisting of an Infantry Unit of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps.

An energetic group of cadet officers, with the backing of the newly installed E Company, Seventh Regiment, Scabbard and Blade, helped make its thirty-ninth year one of the most notable in the history of the Corps.

Foremost among the military activities of 1929-30 was the presentation of the University of the 80-foot steel flag staff that now graces the east end of the Open Range. Funds to purchase this staff were raised by voluntary subscription within the Corps, material aid being received from Doctor Grace Raymond Hebard.

The year 1929-30 also witnessed the revival of the Cadet Ball, dormant since 1921. This was a brilliant affair, marked by unusual decorations, splendid military music furnished by the 20th U. S. Infantry Orchestra of Fort Francis E. Warren, and the presence of many distinguished guests, including a delegation of twenty from the Colorado Agricultural College.

Sergeant Knicker, Sergeant Glover, Mr. Thompson.
Lieut. Hallock, Lieut. McNary, Major Daly, Lieut. Adams, Lieut. Yates.

Trophies won by Wyoming R. O. T. C. members at Fort Wright.

The civic organizations and merchants of Laramie were most generous in their support of the "army" and contributed many valuable and unique prizes for military competition. As a result, an innovation was introduced in the first annual "Honor Parade," held May 29, when military honors won during the year were presented.

The year 1929-30 is one which will be remembered for the accomplishments which have been shown. 1930-31 will be better still, for the Army always carries on.

R. O. T. C. BAND

THE R. O. T. C. Band is an invaluable unit, not only to the Cadet Corps, but also to the University in general. In addition to its function in the Military Department, the band renders an estimable contribution to the students of the University of Wyoming and the residents of Laramie by playing for athletic contests, University functions, and patriotic observances, such as Decoration Day.

THE GYMNASIUM-ARMORY, completed in 1925, is one of the finest buildings of this nature found on any university campus in the West. In this building, bearing on its cornerstone the dedication: HEALTH—STRENGTH—COURAGE—NATIONAL DEFENSE—the University has provided quarters and facilities for military instruction so unique in arrangement, so complete and so convenient, as to have attracted nation-wide interest.

ALPHA TAU OMEGA

ALPHA TAU OMEGA was founded at Richmond, Virginia, September 11, 1865, by Otis Allan Grazebrook, Alfred Marshall and Erskine Mayo Ross. It was the first fraternity founded after the Civil War and was projected as a national organization. Installed in 1913, the Wyoming chapter was named "Wyoming Gamma Psi." There are 91 active chapters of the fraternity and a total membership of approximately 25,000. A congress of the chapters meets biennially. Publication is The Palm.

Prominent members of the fraternity include Irving Bacheller, author; Thomas Arkle Clark, dean of men, University of Illinois; R. L. Bullard, Major General, United States Army; Thomas W. Gregory, former U. S. Attorney General; B. S. Hopkins, professor of chemistry and discoverer of Element 61; Robert E. Vinson, president of Western Reserve University; Robert Lee Williams, former Governor and Chief Justice of Oklahoma.

Prominent alumni of the local chapter are Wilbur Hitchcock, architect; Milward Simpson, member of Wyoming legislature; William Cobb, attorney and a member of the legislature; Tracy McCracken, editor Wyoming Eagle, and Arthur Taliaferro, attorney.

Active members of Alpha Tau Omega are engaged in work on the Wyo. Branding Iron and Theta Alpha Phi plays. They are represented in football, swimming, boxing and wrestling. Important A. S. U. W. and class offices are held by members of this fraternity.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON was founded at the University of Alabama, March 9, 1856, by eight students. Chief of these was Noble Leslie De Votie, who had written the ritual, devised the grip and chosen the name. The fraternity was designed to be national in extent and had seven chapters before the end of the year 1857. Wyoming Alpha Chapter was installed January 26, 1917. At present the fraternity has 103 active chapters and approximately 34,000 members. The publication of Sigma Alpha Epsilon is The Record.

Prominent members of Sigma Alpha Epsilon include former Secretary of War J. M. Dickinson, United States Senator Pat Harrison, "Bobby" Jones, Governor William Brandon of Alabama and Senator Key Pittman of Nevada. Prominent alumni of the local chapter are: Carl F. Arnold, Professor of Law, University of Wyoming; Dr. Samuel H. Knight, head of Department of Geology, University of Wyoming; E. Deane Hunton, head of Division of Commerce, University of Wyoming, and Lewis J. Holliday, president of the Board of Trustees, Laramie Public Schools.

Active members of Sigma Alpha Epsilon are well represented in football, basketball and track, and in work on the Wyo. and Branding Iron. Several class officers and places on the debate team are also held by members of this group.

INDEPENDENT CLUB

THE INDEPENDENT CLUB is six years old. It was formally organized at the University of Wyoming February 25, 1924, by a group of non-fraternity men. Before that time an organization known as the Independent Association had existed. The new club, organized by members of the old, was stronger internally, members being bound by a constitution, complete ritual and by-laws.

The second year of the club's history saw the advent of a more clearly defined relationship with the University and its activities, and more men were recognized as scholars and athletes. In the year 1927 one of the club members was president of the A.S.U.W.

With the club's affiliation with the Interfraternity Council a petition was begun in 1926 for national rating, and Sigma Chi was made the goal. No definite action, however, was taken until the year 1925-26 when communications began toward securing the charter.

Following the visit of an official investigating officer last winter, the club was given permission to submit its formal petition to Sigma Chi. The goal was reached May 14, 1930, when the University and the Independent Club was granted a charter by Sigma Chi.

Sigma Chi is one of the "Miami Triad," and was founded at Miami University, June 28, 1855. There are to date 89 active chapters and a total membership of 27,229.

Members of the Independent Club are prominent in football, track, A. S. U. W., Wyo, and boxing. Paul Scott, a member, has recently been named a Rhodes scholar.

DELTA MU ALPHA

DELTA MU ALPHA was founded October 21, 1922, with six charter members. G. E. Pendray, a charter member, was for two years editor of the student publication and the founder of "The Branding Iron." Mr. Pendray served on the Republican-Boomerang staff while attending the University. At present he is picture editor of the New York Herald-Tribune, and is also the author of a new book, the "Earth-Tube." E. A. Blanchard, another of the founders of the fraternity and honor graduate of the Law School, is now a member of the Union Pacific legal department at Omaha, Nebraska. Delta Mu Alpha is petitioning Phi Delta Theta.

The chapter has been well represented in athletic contests during the past year, eleven varsity letters having been won by representatives of this organization. The fraternity has participated in all intramural events, winning the intramural rifle contest and placing well up in boxing, wrestling, basketball and track competition. The organization is represented in various academic and scholastic honorary organizations and has won the Interfraternity scholarship cup for the past three years. "Wyoming Blues," dedicated to the fraternity, has recently been published by Baker and Sessions, two members of the fraternity.

Two of the highest fellowships to be awarded to University students have been conferred upon Bruce Parsons and Leo Paschal of this fraternity by Cornell University.

The Interfraternity Council

THE purpose of the Interfraternity Council is to further the interests of the fraternities on the campus and to foster closer cooperation among the fraternities and between the fraternities of the University. The council acts upon fraternity policies, outlines the rushing and pledging program, and approves all pledges before they may be initiated. The Interfraternity Ball, sponsored annually by this group is one of the outstanding social events of the year. In order to encourage scholarship a cup is given by this council each year to the fraternity with the highest average.

Women's Pan-Hellenic

THE WOMEN'S PAN-HELLENIC is made up of six women fraternities on the campus, the local groups being admitted on the same basis as the nationals. The organization is banded together by a council of representatives consisting of one Alumna, one Senior and one Junior delegate from each group. Dr. Clara McIntyre has been chosen to act as faculty representative on the council.

It is the purpose of this council to foster a feeling of good will between the groups and to iron out any difficulties which may arise. The social events sponsored by Pan-Hellenic are a dance, which was this year given at Gray's Gables, and a breakfast in the spring quarter for the women on the campus receiving the highest scholastic averages in their respective groups.

The members of the council for the year 1929-30 were:

CAP AND GOWN

CAP AND GOWN, Senior Women's Honorary, bases its membership upon three main points—Scholarship, Leadership and Service. Each spring from five to seven Junior women who represent the highest type of college women are elected to Cap and Gown membership. The society has as its ideals the ideals of Mortar Board, the National Senior Women's Honorary, which Cap and Gown intends to petition at the earliest possible date. These ideals include the recognition and encouragement of a well-rounded college life in which leadership is developed and service is given freely, while at the same time a high standard of scholarship is upheld.

THETA ALPHA PHI

THETA ALPHA PHI is the national honorary dramatic society whose accomplishments in the field of dramatics have been outstanding successes. The productions of this year have been "Dec'assee," "Aren't We All?" and "Journey's End," all of which had the master finish under the direction of Mabelle DeKay.

Theta Alpha Phi is one of the most active organizations on the campus in which membership is greatly coveted.

Most of the talent for the successful "Good Will" tour was furnished by this organization.

QUILL CLUB

THORN RUNE of American College Quill Club is one of the outstanding societies of its kind in the collegiate world. Quill Club is made up of students and faculty members who are genuinely interested in creative writing. Membership is determined by try-out manuscripts which the active chapter judges on their own merits. Any form of literary work, either verse or prose, is considered at the semi-annual try-outs. The ideal of the society is to promote interest in literary endeavor by means of constructive criticism and encouragement, and to provide a common bond for the people in the University who are interested in writing. Each year Thorn Rune produces a magazine of the work of its members.

DELTA SIGMA RHO

DELTA SIGMA RHO is a national honorary forensic fraternity which was founded April 13, 1906, at Chicago by representatives from the Universities of Chicago, Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, Wisconsin and Northwestern. Delta Sigma Rho was established at the University of Wyoming, May 4, 1917.

Because of the high entrance requirements, membership in this organization is of especial significance. In order to be eligible for membership a person must have two years' experience in intercollegiate competition and must be past the middle of the junior year in college.

The sole purpose of Delta Sigma Rho is to foster the development of forensic talent among its members. In addition to being interested in debating on the campus, Delta Sigma Rho encourages this activity in Wyoming High Schools by presenting a silver loving cup to each of the members of the winning debate team in the State High School Tournament.

Members of Delta Sigma Rho are: Rachel Achenbach, Olive Cushing, Alice Ellen Ford, Harry Hall, William Holland, John McGowen, Molly Peacock, Warren H. Winter.

PHI UPSILON OMICRON

PHI UPSILON OMICRON FRATERNITY is a national home economics honorary society. The first chapter was organized in Minneapolis, Minnesota, in 1909. Wyoming was one of the first colleges to organize a group, and the local chapter, Delta Chapter, was chartered in 1915, thus being the fourth chapter in the United States.

Members are chosen from the Home Economics students in the last quarter of their Sophomore year who rank well in general ability and those who are in the upper two-fifths of their class. The local chapter has the honor this year of being hostess to the National Conclave, which is being held at "Troutdale-in-the-Pines," Evergreen, Co'orado, June 19th to June 22nd.

The active members of the organization this year are: Edith Gwynn, Hazel Keller, Madeline Affolter, Emma Wahl, Margaret Blake and Bernice Burton. Miss McKittrick is an honorary member.

PI GAMMA MU

PI GAMMA MU is a national Social Science society. It is purely honorary in character and its membership is composed of students of Social Science who have obtained an average of two or above, and of members of the faculty. Discussions of problems which have a bearing on the study of Social Science compose the major activity of Pi Gamma Mu on the campus. It is one of the most active national honoraries at Wyoming, even though little publicity is given the work of its members.

Twenty-two hours in the Social Science studies are a necessary pre-requisite to membership.

MASK AND SANDAL

MASK AND SANDAL, the junior dramatic fraternity of the University, was organized as a separate organization in the fall of 1928 under the direction of Theta Alpha Phi. This organization acts as a stepping stone for the junior dramatics in aiding them to become eligible for Theta Alpha Phi. Miss Lois Law was appointed sponsor by the senior organization.

Since the organization of this society it has progressed rapidly and last fall an official pin was obtained. It is two masks intersected by a sandal with the letters M. S. on it.

During the past year fifteen plays have been given, and from these plays twenty-seven pledges, who showed their ability in previous try-outs, were declared eligible for initiation. Initiation was held March 16, after which a luncheon was served.

SIGMA PI SIGMA

SIGMA PI SIGMA is a national honorary psychology fraternity, which was organized in 1929 by prominent psychologists from a number of universities and colleges throughout the United States. Dr. June Downey was one of the founders, and largely through her influence the Psychology Club of this University was taken in as a charter member. Membership in Sigma Pi Sigma is open to both students and faculty members, and is contingent upon high scholastic work in the field of psychology. The officers of the local chapter for the year are: Dr. June Downey, Adviser; Alice Ellen Ford, President; William C. Holland, Vice President, and Bertha Ashley, Secretary-Treasurer.

SIGMA XI

Sigma Xi was installed at the University after that organization had granted a charter to the Science Club, which for some years had been active on the Wyoming campus. Sigma Xi is made up of graduate students who have had their work published, and who have shown marked ability to carry on research work. The granting of a charter to the scientists of the University of Wyoming is a signal honor for the institution. The officers of Sigma Xi are: Dr. Aven Nelson, President; J. E. Eckert, Vice President, and Dr. Cecil Elder, Secretary-Treasurer.

ZETA PHI

Zeta Phi is an honorary engineering fraternity, which was established on the campus in 1920. Tau Beta Phi is the national fraternity which its members are endeavoring to bring to the University of Wyoming. High scholastic standing and recognized talent in the field of engineering are the prerequisites to membership. All fields of engineering are reviewed by the organization, and since its founding Zeta Phi has been active in promoting the work of the College of Engineering and in encouraging scholarship among the engineers. Officers for the year are: Roy Buckmaster, President; Chauncy Griswold, Vice President; F. O. Blair, Secretary, and Jack Stenberg, Treasurer.

LAMBDA GAMMA DELTA

LAMBDA GAMMA DELTA is an honorary organization whose membership is composed of the outstanding people in the College of Agriculture. One of Lambda Gamma Delta's major requirements for membership is excellence in understanding of animal husbandry and stock judging. The chapter has been active in encouraging scholastic activity in the College of Agriculture. Fred Hultz is sponsor to the local organization.

KAPPA DELTA PI

Kappa Delta Pi is an honorary educational fraternity. The fraternity was founded at the University of Illinois in 1911. The Wyoming chapter was founded in 1926 and since that time has had an active membership composed of students in the College of Education. The fraternity endeavors to maintain the highest educational ideals and to foster fellowship, scholarship, and achievement in educational work. Officers are: President, Flora H. Krueger; Vice President, Vera A. Beitel; Secretary, Maurine Hollo; Treasurer, Leslie S. Crawford; Counsellor, Prof. O. C. Schwiering.

PHI KAPPA PHI

Phi Kappa Phi is a national honorary scholarship fraternity whose membership is selected from those of the Senior class whose scholarship is outstanding. Phi Kappa Phi was founded at the University of Maine in 1897 by men who saw the need of an honor society formed on broader lines than any then in existence. The Wyoming chapter was organized in 1922. Membership in the organization is one of the greatest honors offered to the members of the Senior class. Those receiving membership in Phi Kappa Phi from this year's Senior class are: Madeline Affolter, Hortense Soward, James Lloyd, Louise Rhode, Oscar Blair, Jean Warner, John McGowen and Jack Stenburg.

THE CALL

O H, this is not for me ;
The city and its crowd,
The pulse of heated life
And wrong that cries aloud.

It is not for me to live
Where God is second-place,
Where nature's gone, and men
Move at a fiendish pace.

Not for me to settle down
Upon a quiet farm ;
Not mine to rest, but drift
Beneath a restless arm.

The wild has seized my heart
And bred the lust to roam,
And woke a passionate fire
To camp the trails alone.

—A. Jack Richards.

Associated Women Students

WYOMING coeds are organized under the national rulings of Associated Women Students. The executive board of this organization functions as a student governing body, and supervises many of the social activities on the campus. This year we were especially fortunate in having the opportunity of acting as hostesses to the Western Conference of Associated Women Students at their annual convention, held April 16, 17 and 18. The women made a huge success of it, and the splendid cooperation shown by each individual girl proved that first loyalty is to the larger unit.

This was the first time Wyoming has entertained the delegates of the Western Conference at Convention and the women are justifiably proud of their success. Thirty-seven schools were represented by some sixty-five delegates, and the three days were filled with interesting meetings and social events. The general theme of entertainment was built around the frontier spirit, which is our heritage and just pride; such names as "The Wranglers' Dinner," "The Roundup Luncheon" and the "Song of the Sage Banquet" featured the leading functions. Visitors were impressed by the thorough organization of the whole affair, and Miss Myrtle Yoder (our A. W. S. president, who had general charge of directing activities) did a splendid piece of work.

The deans of women of the Western Conference schools held their convention at the same time, and met with the student delegates in some interesting joint sessions. They were the guests of the student group at the formal banquet, held at Gray's Gables on April 17.

Blue Key

BLUE KEY is a national men's booster organization, which was installed on the Wyoming campus in 1927. Members take an active part in organizing pep meetings, assisting in handling crowds at games, and stimulating pep at games. Homecoming witnessed Blue Key as one of the leading factors in putting over a successful program.

The strength of the organization depends upon the cooperative spirit manifest among its members who have sensed the spirit of organization and believe in the University whose welfare they are striving to promote.

Scabbard and Blade

THE COMPANY, 7th Regiment, of the National Society of Scabbard and Blade, was installed at the University of Wyoming on June 4, 1929, by H Company, 4th Regiment, of Colorado Agricultural College. It replaced the local honorary military society, Forward Echelon, which had been founded here on March 22, 1925.

Scabbard and Blade is a national military society made up of selected cadet officers at colleges and universities where there are companies of the society. At present there are seventy-eight companies at as many different institutions offering baccalaureate degrees. The society was founded at the University of Wisconsin in 1905, with the formation of A Company, 1st Regiment.

The purpose of Scabbard and Blade is to raise the standard of military training in American colleges and universities, to unite in closer relationship their military departments, to encourage and foster the essential qualities of good and efficient officers and to promote intimacy and good fellowship among the cadet officers. The society offers trophies each year for rifle and pistol competition between R. O. T. C. units.

W Club

THIS year saw the reorganization of the "W" Club after several years of inactivity. The club was brought to life by a few of the surviving members who were still in school and Laramie alumni. Initiation was held for all the men who had won their letters in the past few years. This brought a large number of new men into the club, and it got off on a running start. Meetings were held once a week until the club got well under way.

The "W" Club was very active during Tournament Week. Each member sponsored and looked after some high school team during the week, seeing that they were well taken care of. A smoker was sponsored at the Little Theatre the final night for the male visitors.

The alumni in Laramie were largely responsible for the reorganization and success of the club this year. Those taking an active interest and part in the organization are: "Red" Willis, Claude Linton, A. H. Cordiner, Ross Moudy, Fred Rice, Deane Hunton and Coach John Corbett.

Potter Law Club

POTTER LAW CLUB, named in honor of the late Chief Justice Charles N. Potter of the Wyoming Supreme Court, is an organization of students and faculty of the Law School. The purpose of the Club is to stimulate the interest of its members in legal science. Several times each year sessions of moot court are held in the Law School court room, with members of the Potter Law Club acting as counsels. The honor system is in use in the Law School, and the members of the Club are instrumental in carrying through the successful application of the system.

The Ag Club

AG CLUB is made up of wide-awake students of the Ag College who wish to make the most of their college training. Meetings are held twice a month, at which time entertainment is provided by eminent speakers who discuss important problems of modern agriculture. The Ag Club backs the livestock judging teams, aiding them financially and securing medals for the freshmen of high rank in the annual freshman judging contest.

When freshmen enrolling in the College of Agriculture arrive to begin school at the University the Club members aid them in registering and in becoming located comfortably. The Ag Club gives a beefsteak fry each fall in a popular retreat in the hills, where the new members become acquainted with the faculty and older members. Another beefsteak fry is held near the end of the school year. At this time plans for the next year are discussed and the seniors are given a send-off.

The annual Ag Club dance, held at the stock farm each fall, is the most popular dance of the year, being sponsored entirely by the Ag Club.

Irrational Club

IRRATIONAL CLUB is an organization for all students who are interested in mathematics. It meets every two weeks, at which time various topics are discussed which are of particular interest to mathematics students. These talks are given by members of the University faculty and by students of the Mathematics Department.

In addition to the meetings of this character, the Club meets socially three times each year. One social meeting is always held during the first part of the fall quarter, another is in the form of a Valentine party and the third takes place in the spring, at which time the members enjoy a picnic.

The Club is governed by three officers, two other student members appointed by the officers and one faculty member.

The 1929-1930 Club consists of about twenty-five members and has had a very successful year. Interesting topics, such as "Astronomy" and "Mathematics of Music," were discussed. The Club closed its year with a steak fry held at Crow Creek on May 22.

Big Sisters

THE ASSOCIATED WOMEN STUDENTS of the University of Wyoming feel that the Big Sister organization is one of its strongest departments. This department has as its sole purpose—Freshmen Orientation.

The Big Sisters are upperclass women who have been chosen because of their ability to help others adjust themselves to conditions on our campus which may be new to them.

These women have been chosen from each sorority, the Halls and Varsity Villagers, so they understand the problems of all the women on the campus who are coming to school for the first time.

Kappa Phi

KAPPA PHI is a national organization composed of the Methodist women of the University. The primary object of the organization is to encourage religious fellowship, although, in addition to this, attention is also devoted to music, art, literature and science.

Sociability must enter in with the carrying on of any successful organization, so Kappa Phi has its banquets, its parties and its teas. Every two weeks the organization meets in the Nellie Tayloe Ross room of Merica Hall for the purpose of training girls for religious leadership. During the past year Kappa Phi has had nearly thirty members on its chapter roll.

ATHLETICS

Physical Education Department

JOHN CORBETT, dean of Wyoming athletics, is the most ardent enthusiast that ever backed a Cowboy team. Coach Corbett works unceasingly for the advancement of every branch of athletics here at the University, and his efforts are largely responsible for the success of Wyoming teams in the past.

Well known for his "Hahvudd" accent, he is the father of the annual High School Week, and his assistance is invaluable in the successful completion of the basketball tournament and the subsequent enrollment of many of the most promising of the athletes at the University.

Coach Corbett deserves unlimited praise, too, for his perseverance and ability in encouraging and fostering athletics among others beside varsity contestants, taking active charge of all of the minor sports activities during the year. May his success be continued.

JOHN CORBETT
Director of Physical Education

GEORGE McLAREN, head of varsity athletics, has just finished his last year at the University. Coming to the Cowboy camp as a former all-American football player, Coach McLaren has done much to advance the Cowboy cause and turn out teams with the fighting Wyoming spirit. Although success on the gridiron has not fallen to the lot of Wyoming elevens lately, the prestige gained by the basketball squad has more than balanced the scales.

In his first year at Wyoming Coach McLaren aided in turning out the basketball team which won the eastern division title. In his second year the Cowboys were barely nosed out late in the season in the race for division honors. This year he developed an aggregation of players that was generally conceded to be the best in the eastern division. Finishing second in the division, Coach McLaren piloted the team to a victory in the regional meet held at Denver.

Cowboy track teams for the last three years have not been sensational, but Coach McLaren has succeeded in developing many promising cinder artists during his stay here. He will leave the University this spring, and the best wishes of the student body are accorded him.

Bill Lee
Trainer

Claude Linton completed his last year at Wyoming after aiding Coach McLaren in getting the Cowboy gridiron machine in shape for battle. Coach Linton was in charge of the varsity line and his direction of the linemen made them one of the hardest fighting forward walls in the conference, and one that neither took nor gave odds in any game.

William R. Lee, head trainer at the Cowboy gym, has for some years been responsible for the conditioning of Wyoming athletes. Always on the job to see that Wyoming football, basketball and track men are feeling in the very best possible condition, his efforts have been rewarded in his elevation to a post on the new Cowboy coaching staff.

Raymond Frazer, coach of boxing, wrestling and gymnastics, directed Cowboy teams this year in conference competition after a period when these activities were not recognized. His boxing and wrestling teams can furnish tough rivalry for any other squad of fighters in the region, and he is responsible in a large measure for the fine showing made by Wyoming teams this season.

Raymond Frazer
Coach Boxing and Gymnastics

Edward Miller
Freshman Football Coach

Ed Miller finished another successful season as freshman football mentor, guiding his charges through a stiff season of combat and developing several freshmen stars. His team won two games, lost one and tied one, and many of the men under his direction last season will undoubtedly be outstanding as varsity men next year. This is Coach Miller's last year at the University, too, and he will leave with the best wishes of all the Cowboys.

FOOTBALL

CAPTAIN RALPH STEWART, tackle, has been one of the most consistent performers on the Cowboy team, directing the field battle in a fine manner, and playing a flashy offensive and defensive game in every battle. His efforts at instilling the team with a fighting spirit met with success in every contest, and although the Cowboys only gained one victory during the season, they fought superior teams with undeniable ferocity, only lacking the reserve strength necessary to continue the fight throughout the four periods of play.

The Football Season

OPENING the season against an unexpectedly powerful eleven from the Black Hills Teachers College, the Cowboys were forced to extend themselves to win a 13-to-6 victory. The Teachers counted the first touchdown with a rapid march to the goal, but the Cowboys retaliated with a savage march, which gave Wyoming two touchdowns and the game. Play on both teams was ragged and frequent fumbles marred the contest.

Meeting the Colorado Aggies at Fort Collins in the first conference game, the Cowboys exhibited a flashy attack and a stubborn defense, which put them on the long end of a 7-to-0 count at the half. Wyoming pushed over a touchdown in the first few minutes of play, recovering an Aggie fumble and marching to scoring territory, where a pass to Thompson was good for a tally. The Aggies came back in the last half, and overpowered the Cowboys with their reserve strength, and although Wyoming's men put up a splendid battle, when the cloud of conflict had lifted the Farmers had piled up three touchdowns to win, 20 to 7.

Denver University formed the next opposition for Wyoming, a large number of Cowboy rooters making the trip to Denver to see the game. Again the Cowboys opened a speedy attack which netted a touchdown in the first few minutes of play, but the Pioneers soon recovered from the surprise and started a crushing march, which carried them to a 19-to-6 victory. The Denver line was impregnable after the quick touchdown pushed over by the Cowboys and smothered every attempt of the Wyoming backs to gain. The Pioneers' aerial attack worked to perfection during the afternoon for long gains, largely through the almost uncanny ability of Ketchum, Denver end, to snag passes at any place on the field.

Before the largest crowd in Homecoming history, the Cowboys fought a courageous battle against the Utah Aggies, silencing alumni who had voiced a desire to abolish football at Wyoming with one of the greatest exhibitions on University field. The Aggies terminated a powerful advance with a touchdown and a few minutes later intercepted a Wyoming pass to give them another touchdown and a 12-point lead. At this point in the game the Wyoming line stiffened and took the ball on downs. Outweighed in the line and backfield, the Cowboys asked no odds and started a rally which kept the crowd on its feet until a touchdown had been marked up. It was a great march, and the spectators, alumni and students alike shouted and cheered long after the counter had been chalked on the board. The Aggies started a march of their own then, and although Wyoming kept them from scoring, no addition could be made to the Cowboy score, and the game ended 12 to 6.

The next game found the Cowboys at Greeley, favorites to down the Teachers eleven by at least two touchdowns. Wyoming started march after march only to be held on the five or ten yard line and lose the ball. The offense could not seem to function effectively, lacking scoring punch when the goal line was in sight. The Cowboys could have played better ball, but they failed to come through when the opportunity to score presented itself, and went down to a 6-to-0 defeat.

Against the powerful Utah University team, Rocky Mountain champions, the Cowboys put up a gallant battle in the last home game of the season, but were rolled under an avalanche of touchdowns, losing by a score of 44 to 0. The Ute Redshirts advanced the ball with ease, passing and plunging their way to a third conference championship. The Utes were just too big and too powerful, and from the opening gun displayed a style of football which left no doubt as to the outcome.

In the last game of the season Wyoming met Brigham Young University at Provo, and went down under a barrage of passes to a 40-to-0 defeat. The Cowboy backfield was able to advance the ball from scrimmage with ease, but the Brigham Young line managed to hold at critical moments, the Cougar backfield swinging into action with a superlative aerial attack to score six touchdowns.

Sammy Hale and Ray Thompson played great games at their halfback positions during the season, and were two of the hardest backs in the conference to stop. At the full-back position, Jess Ekdall and Dave Kidd were on hand to consistently advance the oval whenever a short gain was needed. Ed Ross and Al Barker turned in outstanding performances in the backfield and frequently accounted for long gains. In the line, Joe Porter and Ben Joyce played steady, hard games at the wing positions, with Coughlin playing end and punting when necessary. Jim Hirst and Captain Stewart turned in consistently good games at tackle, with Paul Scott, Einar Bergstrom and Ben Buckley putting lots of fight in the center of the line. The entire squad deserves credit for putting up battles against teams which outweighed them tremendously, fighting in every instance right up to the final gun.

Freshman Football

STARTING the season with a rush, the Frosh football team invaded Cheyenne and rode roughshod over the 20th Infantry team at Fort D. A. Russell, with a 20-to-0 victory. Most of the yearlings saw service in the opening contest and worked hard to produce the triumph.

In the second game the Calfbos met the Colorado College Frosh at Colorado Springs and battled to a scoreless tie, 0 to 0, with neither team making a really serious attempt to score.

At home, the Frosh met the 1st Infantry from Fort D. A. Russell and lost, 6 to 0 score, on a snow-covered field, with the thermometer hovering around the zero mark. The weather was too bad to permit any classy football and the Frosh were forced to bow before the bone-crushing tactics of the soldiers.

The final game saw the Colorado Teachers roll into Laramie confident of a victory, and roll out a few hours later smarting under a 35-to-0 defeat. Although the weather was still far from good, Joe Schwartz, aided splendidly by his teammates, had a field day to score 27 points, passing and running his way through the Teacher yearlings with ease. Coach Ed Miller deserves a great deal of credit for turning out such a strong Frosh team.

The Diver

A SWIFT approach,
An arching flight,
A splash, and then
White, foamy, swiftly-rising bubbles.

Slow-hobbling ripples
Advance with measured time
To dash in futile, feeble fury
Against the whitened sides.

A smooth brown head
Comes and moves swiftly,
Gracefully to the side
And a dripping form stands
Poised and alert
Ready for another dive.

BASKETBALL

CAPTAIN CHARLES "CHUCK" COUGHLIN, invincible leader of the Cowboy basketball team, led his teammates through a successful season among the conference performers to finish in second place in the division. In the post-season A. A. U. meet at Denver, "Chuck" was outstanding in his play, and was a big factor in bringing to Wyoming the regional championship. Chosen on every all-conference team as guard, his performance during the season has established him as one of Wyoming's greatest basketball players, and he will next season be a member of the University coaching staff.

The Basketball Season

STARTING the season January 5th, the Cowboys met the Laramie Union Pacific team, and easily came through on the winning end of the 47-to-20 score, Schwartz and Jiacoletti taking scoring honors. Against the Cheyenne Union Pacific squad, the Brown and Yellow warriors turned in a fast passing game for a 51-to-26 victory. Joe Schwartz and Jimmy Jiacoletti again looked good from their forward positions, with Engstrom and Captain Coughlin playing good defensive games.

In the first conference clash of the season Jimmy Jiacoletti started a scoring spree, and, with the aid of Schwartz and Johnny Engstrom, gathered in an overwhelming 51-to-26 victory over the Colorado Teachers. "Chuck" Coughlin and Floyd Dunker kept the defense airtight, and stopped Blight and Olander from tallying for the Pedagogues.

A sudden snowstorm prevented the splitting of a two-game series with the Aggies, with the result that both contests were staged on the home floor of the Cowboys, who displayed a speedy attack and an impregnable defense to win the afternoon game, 46 to 26, and the evening game, 56 to 36. The team from Colorado Aggies never had a chance, and the result was never in doubt, with Engstrom leading the scoring, closely followed by Schwartz and Jiacoletti. "Chuck" Coughlin and Floyd Dunker again kept the Aggie forwards, Hitchcock and Barrow, away from the basket in great style, while Gear looped three goals from the guard position.

Jiacoletti

McNiff

Schwartz

Against the traveling De Paul University team from Chicago, the Cowboys exhibited champ form in winning, 33 to 25. Joe Schwartz led the scoring this time, followed by Engstrom and Jiacoletti. De Paul never threatened, although their star forwards, Coan and Asher, played a flashy game.

In the first game away from home the Cowboys played a slow first half against Colorado University at Boulder, but came back with a rush in the last half to bring the score up to a 23-to-23 score as the regular time ended. Going into the extra period with the intention of gaining the victory, the Cowpunchers were unable to hit the basket and unable to stop the Colorado forwards from gathering ten points and the victory. Lefferdick led the Boulder scorers, with Midd'emist and Chalgren playing fast basketball. Jimmy Jiacoletti led the Cowboy point-gatherers, but no member of the team seemed able to play the class of ball of which they were capable, and Wyoming lost its first contest, 33 to 23.

In a return game played three days later on the Cowboy "half-acre," Wyoming emerged from one of the most spectacular battles ever witnessed at the University with a 35-to-34 victory over the Silver and Gold team. Fighting nip and tuck through the greater part of the game, passing the ball back and forth with bewildering rapidity, the score was tied at 34-all with only a minute of the required time left to play. It remained for Jay Gaer to enter the game in Dunker's place and loop in a free throw to give Wyoming one of its greatest victories. Coughlin and Dunker played whirlwind games from their guard positions, continually stopping Colorado rallies, with Engstrom, Thomas and Jiacoletti working together nicely for scores.

Away from home again, at Denver, Wyoming's men again failed to come through in their usual way, and lost to the Denver University quintet, 35 to 23. The Pioneers led at the half, 23 to 8, and held the lead during the remainder of the contest, although McNiff started a gallant but futile rally late in the last quarter. McNiff was the star of the game, leading the Cowboy attack in flashy style, with Coughlin and Schwartz turning in good performances. Hively gathered 21 points for the Pioneers and, with Byers aiding, won the contest. The following night the Cowboys met Colorado College at Colorado Springs and, playing a slow game, lost by a 31-to-25 tally. McNiff and Schwartz again were the mainstays of the Wyoming team, but their valiant fight was unavailing against the scoring ability of "Dutch" Clark and Ingraham, who played the most spectacular game ever seen on the Tiger floor. The Cowboys really played a fine game, but the Tigers were "on" that evening and would not be denied the victory.

Returning home, the Cowboys started a three-weeks rest, taking time out long enough to drub the speedy Pratt Book Store team from Denver, 50 to 44. Claude Thomas played a "hot" game at forward and gathered 19 points during the game for scoring honors, leading the Wyoming attack in great style. Jiacoletti and McNiff played great floor games, and with Coughlin and Dunker guarding the Pratt forwards closely, aided in the triumph. James, former Denver University star, played a very clever game for the losers, with Stanton, their lanky center, leading the Book Store scoring. The Pratt team rallied late in the game and threatened seriously, but Johnny Engstrom entered the game, put new life into the Cowboy attack and cinched the victory.

In the final home games of the season Wyoming met Denver University and Colorado College on successive nights. Against the Pioneers, McNiff went on a scoring spree and garnered 22 points, keeping the Denver quint from offering any real threat and aiding in the 46-to-29 win. He was easily the outstanding performer of the game, and with Jiacoletti, Coughlin and Engstrom playing guard, held the Pioneer aces, Hively and Byers, to a few scattered baskets. Against Colorado College the next night, "Chuck" Coughlin turned in one of the greatest games at guard ever seen at Wyoming, and almost single-handed stopped the Tigers from even coming close to a success. McNiff again had a good night, and with Jimmy Jiacoletti hitting the basket with ease, pushed the Cowboys into an early lead. "Dutch" Clark and Hinkley played flashy ball for Colorado College, but couldn't get through the Wyoming defense.

At Greeley, Wyoming met the Colorado Teachers in the final game of the season, and won handily, 24 to 22. The Teachers trailed through most of the game, but flashed a brief spurt late in the game, which almost tied the score. Jimmy Jiacoletti headed the Wyoming offensive, with McNiff, Coughlin and Thomas turning back the Teacher threat.

The Cowboys finished the conference race in second place, with a percentage of .700, winning seven games and losing three. In points-per-game scoring, Wyoming led the eastern division with a total of 37.2, while many critics were of the opinion that the Cowboys were easily the class of the division, and could have taken the championship with more games on their schedule.

Substantiating this belief, the Cowboys entered the post-season A. A. U Tournament at Denver and defeated Garland Grocers, 37 to 15; Don Cowell's, 32 to 16; Denver University, 30 to 25, and Colorado College in the finals, 31 to 19, to win the championship. Their clean, hard game made the Cowboys a popular team in the tournament. Entering the national A. A. U. meet at Kansas City as the Rocky Mountain representative, Wyoming won from the Tulsa Athletic Club, 44 to 21, in the opening contest. After drawing a bye, they lost the next game to the Olympic Club, later to be a finalist in the race, by a 44-to-30 score, to conclude the 1930 basketball season with a wonderful record.

TRACK

IN the first meet of the season, held at Boulder, with Colorado University, Denver University and Wyoming competing, the lack of training caused by bad weather was apparent in the Cowboy squad. Colorado won the meet, with 113 points, and Wyoming finished third, with 28. John Turner jumped into prominence with a fine race in the 440-yard dash to win over the other contestants by a safe margin. The other members of the squad gathered places in all but a few events.

The following week Wyoming met Colorado College at Colorado Springs in a dual meet, which resulted in the Tiger's victory, with 88 $\frac{2}{3}$ points to the Cowboys' 51 $\frac{1}{3}$. Scott, Turner, Hale, Gray and Shelton won first places in their events.

At the annual Boulder Relays, Wyoming failed to win a first place against strong competition by schools from all over the Rockies. Colorado University retained its relay championship.

SWIMMING

GETTING a rather late start, Wyoming's swimmers, under the direction of Coach C. L. Porter, opened the conference schedule with a meet at Boulder against the Colorado University mermen. The Cowboys splashed valiantly, but the Silver and Gold natators emerged from the waves with a 52-to-12 victory firmly in their grasp.

Returning home, the team put in some intensive practice, showing improved form in the next match with the Aggies in the Wyoming home pool. The count was close during the first events, but the Farmer swimmers forged into the lead in the third race and were never headed. The final score favored the Colorado team, 44 to 24.

In the final dual meet of the season the Cowboys followed Captain Dallas' lead in a plucky fight against the Colorado University swimmers here, but went to the bottom under a 54-to-15 tally.

Captain Dallas gathered a first place in his specialty, diving, in each meet, and climaxed the season by winning the conference diving championship in the meet held at the Colorado Teachers' pool.

BOXING

AGAINST the Colorado Aggie fighters in the first meet of the season the Cowboys made their debut with a smashing 30-to-5 victory. The Wyoming pugilists displayed some very clever form in turning back the Farmer team, winning all but one class in decisive manner. Technical knockouts were a feature of the meet, with the Wyoming men completely outclassing their opponents.

In the only other dual meet of the season the boxers journeyed to Boulder and lost by a 20-to-15 score, turning in nice pugilistic performances, but facing the disadvantage of a referee who was unfavorable in his decisions. Ekdall, Mallalieu, Spriggs and Burkholder turned in some fine exhibitions during the season and were the best of the Wyoming fighters.

WRESTLING

MEETING the Colorado Aggie wrestling team in the first meet, the Cowboy grapplers started out to make a clean sweep in the lighter classes, but saw victory slip from their grasp when the tide turned as the heavy-weights came on the mat, the Farmers winning a 30-to-15 triumph.

At Boulder the Wyoming matmen met the Colorado squad in the next matches and lost out by a 23-to-5 score. The Silver and Gold had the advantage in experience and toughness, and clearly out-classed the Cowboys to take every match but one.

Morgan, Slifer and Klohs were the best of the tusslers, showing flashy form in both meets.

APPARATUS AND TUMBLING

WYOMING gymnasts demonstrated clever form in the first contest in holding the Colorado University gymnasters to a 242-to-222 victory at Boulder. Coach "Babe" Frazer's team put up a plucky fight against the supposedly invincible Colorado team and kept the final result in doubt until the finish of the last event.

Meeting the Aggies on the Wyoming "half acre," the Cowboys again disported themselves in flashy form, but lost a narrow decision to the Farmer squad, 225½ to 217½.

The final meet found the Colorado University team again the opponent, this time on the Cowboys' gym equipment. The Boulder men had no clear-cut advantage, and were forced to extend themselves to roll the Cowboy aerial and mat artists under a 222-to-203½ tally.

Dallas, Richard and Blackmore were the most consistent performers during the season, and put up formidable opposition before the Colorado gymnasts.

INTRAMURAL BASKETBALL

SIGMA NU won the 1930 intramural basketball championship after a hard fight, defeating Sigma Alpha Epsilon in the final game. The league was divided into two divisions of five teams each, Delta Mu Alpha, Independent Club, Men's Residence Hall, Sigma Nu and the Wesley Club comprising the first division, and Alpha Tau Omega, Barbs, Faculty, Kappa Sigma and Sigma Alpha Epsilon the other. The race was unusually close, three teams being tied for first place in each division, with three victories and one defeat, at the end of the regular series of play. Sigma Nu had started slow, dropping the first game to the powerful Dorm five. In the play-off of the first division, the Dorm defeated Delta Mu Alpha, and entered the finals against Sigma Nu, who had drawn a bye. The game was one of the hardest fought struggles of the entire intramurals. With the Dorm leading, and but a few moments to go, the Sigma Nu quint rallied and won by a margin of 36 to 31.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon, last year's champs, won the second division title, defeating Kappa Sigma and A. T. O., thus earning the right to the contest for the championship with Sigma Nu. The championship game found the Sigma Nu five at the top of their game, and they triumphed with little difficulty, 37 to 15.

A. T. O. Boxing and Wrestling Team.

and Ross won first in the light-heavy boxing match. The Alpha Tau Omega squad gathered two boxing and two wrestling victories, Mal-lalieu in the 125-pound division and Shelton in the heavy division, taking the boxing laurels with Morgan in the 135-pound and Klohs in the heavy division winning in the wrestling bouts. The Independent Club placed second, with 15 points, and Delta Mu Alpha took third, with 10.

Intramural Boxing and Wrestling

SIGMA NU and Alpha Tau Omega tied for first honors in the annual intramural boxing and wrestling tournament with 20 points apiece after the smoke of battle had disappeared. Every match was clean and hard-fought, and the individual winners were deserving of the honors. Sigma Nu won three first places in wrestling: Winter in the 125-pound division, Henry in the 158-pound division, and Johnson in the light-heavy division;

Swimming Intramurals

Sigma Nu won the annual intramural swimming tournament by turning back strong opposition from the Alpha Tau Omega mermen to win, 40 to 31. The Sigma Nu swimmers jumped into an early lead and were never headed, although the Alpha Taus threatened once with a rally which came within six points of evening the count, before the winners cinched the meet by victories in the final events. Turner of Sigma Nu and Owen of Alpha Tau Omega gathered two first places apiece for individual honors.

INTRAMURAL TRACK

Kappa Sigma won the intramural track tournament with a nicely balanced squad which swept out of third place in the final round of the meet to gather fifteen points and annex the 1930 championship with a 47-point total. The meet this year was run off in weekly divisions of four events, which made for less strain on the Greek athletes and better marks in the track and field competition.

At first conceded only an outside chance to come in ahead of the favorites, S. A. E. and A. T. O., the Kappa Sigs took 17 points in the third round to make them a serious contender, and then marched through the finals with places in every event to win. The summary gave Kappa Sigma 47 points, Sigma Alpha Epsilon 45 $\frac{1}{3}$, Alpha Tau Omega 44, and Delta Mu Alpha 29 $\frac{1}{3}$.

GOLF

Sigma Alpha Epsilon's fine golf squad gathered the intramural title in that even with a five-stroke lead over their nearest competitors in a 36-hole medal play match. Jay Gaer and Sin Ridgely shot fine scores for the Sig Alphs, the former taking individual low score honors, with a 161-stroke total. The winners scored 347 and the Independent Club team, which finished second, totaled 352.

HORSESHOES

Delta Mu Alpha won the intramural horseshoe tourney by vanquishing the teams of S. A. E., Barbs and I. C. with nice margins. Huffman and Burkholder represented the winners, tossing the shoes around in regulation champ fashion to take the victory.

The Men's Residence Hall

DURING the fall quarter there were about one hundred boys living at the Hall. The winter quarter registration dropped somewhat and the number finally decreased to about seventy during the spring quarter. It is the custom of the Hall to have some speaker each month. During the fall and winter quarters the boys have enjoyed hearing such interesting speakers as President Crane, Dean Soule, Coach Corbett, Professor Downey, Judge Tidball, Mr. Sullivan, Mr. Burrage, Dr. Nelson, Professor Knapp and Bishop Johnson.

The social schedule has included the usual two dances each quarter. In addition, a special tea dance was held on Armistice Day. The social room affords such an excellent place for social functions that frequently University organizations arrange for its use. It also provides a place where the fellows can read and enjoy themselves in their leisure.

The Hall basketball team enjoyed a very successful season, being beaten only twice, once by Delta Mu Alpha by one point and again by Sigma Nu in the semi-finals. Both of these teams were beaten by the Hall team by good scores in other games.

A H! As Belleraphone looked into the blue of heaven,
Or searched in her fleecy clouds,
Or scanned the depths of the spring of Pyrene
For a glimpse of Pegasus,
So look I on this windy night
To the South, North, East and West
To the wind-kissed clouds
Swirling in the heavens.

I thought 'twas the mere winds
Of heaven I wanted to view
But Oh! The winds of my heaven
Must carry you.

CAMPUS SHOP OR CLASS ROOM?

By NANCY BURRAGE

Campusshopology Courses Omitted From Catalogue

1b. This is a course designed for Freshmen only. Prerequisite, a dime. Professor Robert L. Simpson, possessor of a B.B. (Blah Blah) degree from Sheridan High School, in charge of study. Meets every hour of the day. Girls may arrange to take the course whenever the desired boy friend does. Instruction deals with proper guzzling of Cocs and nonchalance in getting out the door when it sticks or you leave half your coat in it. Courses also given on how to ask for cigarettes in a low voice and a careful manner. Girls only in this course. Professor Simpson will also hold an appreciation course—you can learn just when to chortle merrily and exclaim in an awful tone—"Oh Rob!" Tee hee. [Continued on page 36]

FRAT PINS OR FAME?

by MOLLY PEACOCK

Ruth was gazing moodily at the Engineer's Building from a north window of Hoyt Hall. Miriam, her roommate, sat at their study table pounding spasmodically on the keys of a Corona.

"Why can't parents be more considerate?" Miriam burst out. "The idea of expecting a letter every day! They must think I'm down here for my health."

Ruth did not turn around.

"Ummmm," she sighed absent-mindedly.

Spring was in the air. Already the lawns had been mulched, and from her window she could see exactly fifteen sprinklers. That afternoon it had rained and the sidewalks had been covered with cat-tails and angle-worms. Soon the leaves would begin to open and the lawn would be golden with dandelions. There would be fewer and fewer high marks, and more and more and more couples strolling about the campus, in supreme oblivion of everything except each other.

Ruth sighed again, but continued to gaze into the distance. Miriam was in an ugly temper and it made her angry. She and Ruth had roomed together for nearly two years. The first year everything was lovely and their accidental acquaintance had promised to ripen into a close friendship. But since Christmas Ruth had worn a pledge pin of one of the leading sororities and it had created a barrier which strained their relationship. Neither of them ever spoke of it, but they were conscious of it, and Ruth had scarcely touched the earth since she was selected by an exclusive group to be one of them.

"S'matter, darlin'?" Miriam asked. "Why the sentimental sighs? Are you on the trail of another frat pin?"

This time Ruth turned around, perched lightly on the window sill, and flicked her cigarette ashes behind the radiator. She had large blue eyes, pretty features, and knew how to wear clothes. She had lots of them, too, to the great envy of most of her friends.

"No, dearie," she said sweetly, "I wore three frat pins last year, and I'm off of 'em. These fraternity fellows are too fickle. Just let a new baby-faced freshman appear on the campus and they all want to replant their pins."

"Oh, yeh?" Miriam asked sarcastically. "You're a regular Victorian for faithfulness yourself. I remember you took Freddie's pin last year during a fifteen-minute intermission between dates with Bob and Chuck."

"That was different. Anyway, honey, frat pins mean nothing. Besides, I didn't like Freddie; he was too darned attentive. Thought he had to see me every half hour. Say, darlin', keep an ear open for Margaret. As a proctor, she'd make a good night-watchman. She has search-light eyes that never miss a flake of ash."

"Well," Miriam said, "if you read the rules you wouldn't need to worry."

She stood up and stretched satisfyingly.

"Gosh, I'm tired. Typing makes my back ache."

"It wouldn't," Ruth suggested, "if you'd get over your martyr complex for doing everybody's perfect copies for 'em."

"Never mind," Miriam countered. "It pays well. I made five dollars last Saturday, and I can use it."

"And other people get I's on your work. I'm too selfish for that, dearie, even if it does pay well. Gee, I wish to goodness I had something to do tonight. I simply can't study. Besides, who wants to study on Saturday?"

"Haven't you got a date? I'm going to the country club to the S. K. G. fraternity dance," Miriam said casually.

She was not the popular coed type, and not many invitations came her way, as a general rule. There had been several boy friends during the first half of her freshman year, but she was disillusioned to find that it meant just one petting party after another. They were all alike. However much one talked about the intellectual atmosphere of a university, the fact remained that a man preferred kissing a pair of pretty lips to hearing them discuss the latest book or make wise observations on modern social development. Miriam took herself seriously, and came more and more to give all her time and thought to her work. She wanted nothing but to study psychology, and she built rosy dream-castles about chances for unlimited research, with the ever-present prospect of making a great discovery and even of adding something new to her field. Some day she might become an authority on motility patterns and be quoted in the textbooks—she might even write one herself.

Ruth broke in on her reveries.

"It strikes me you and John are doing some heavy dating lately. You'll be wearin' a frat pin yourself if you aren't careful.

"Oh, shut up about your darned frat pins. Can't you think of anything else? John has to have a girl for parties once in a while and I happen to have a pretty dress. That's all. It is neither the really serious kind of case that ends in marriage—like Bob and Mary; nor the fast kind that ends by the sorority announcing the engagement a month after it starts. Don't waste your time worrying about me, honey. I've got an ambition to keep me busy."

"Yes, darlin'," Ruth could be exasperatingly sweet and persistent—sometimes Miriam wanted to spank her—"yes. But ambitions are such vague and unsatisfactory things. Besides, John's—"

"Mine isn't vague, nor unsatisfactory," Miriam retorted. "You say so because you don't know what it means to have one. As for John, he's the only intelligent man I've met since I've been on the campus."

"Really?" Ruth wondered. "Isn't that interesting. It sounds serious."

"Yes, really. He's broad-minded enough to give a girl credit for the intellectual ability to discuss things he's interested in. That's a high compliment. He quotes Kant and Spangler by the yard, and he knows poetry that the average under-graduate couldn't even pronounce. I'll bet his reading list would compare favorably with the most scholarly professor's in the institution."

"Gee, but your'e enthusiastic. He's made an impression, certainly. Did he tell you that—"

"I'll bet you can't guess what he's reading now?" Miriam ignored the interruption. "The Quest for Certainty, by John Dewey. How many students do you think would tackle that without its being assigned? And how many of 'em could understand it if they did?"

"Dearie," Ruth interjected. "You're getting all excited. John'd be proud of himself if he could see you now."

Miriam flushed slightly; she was on the verge of replying, but closed her mouth emphatically, gave Ruth a withering frown, and turned back to her letter.

II

John Fisher was tall, rather slight, and dark. He looked speculatively on the world from behind horn-rimmed glasses with limpid brown eyes, which had fiery lights in them when his interest was aroused. But his attitude was usually one of light indifference, he was reserved in expressing his opinions, and sought few contacts with the students.

Miriam met him one night at the Literary Circle and they became involved in a discussion of character. He gave her Will Durant's interpretation and she explained an experimental theory she was trying to work out. He walked to the dorm with her and they continued the discussion the next time they met. After that they naturally sought each other out in a gathering and were soon deep in conversation. Miriam found that John had a fund of light chatter when with an average group which was inconsistent with the more serious side of his nature. She wondered why he bothered with silly wise-cracks—she had always considered them a foolish waste of time. But John was seldom like that with her and she decided it was some form of defense mechanism.

Then he began to ask her to go to campus parties with him, and showed her a royal good time in an elaborately impersonal way.

"He's as impersonal as a pencil. I'll bet he couldn't make the moon sound any more romantic than a bowl of goldfish," Ruth said a bit scornfully.

But Miriam liked him, and their discussions were stimulating. There were so many things they both liked—books, music, the sunshine—so many ways in which they thought alike.

No doubt it was this impersonal aspect of their friendship which caused Miriam to be genuinely surprised the first time he kissed her. They were dancing on the veranda of the country club and the rest of the party were inside. She had been talking animatedly about something, not noticing that he was watching her mouth instead of listening. Suddenly his eyes softened and he stopped dancing. Both arms went around her and he bent his head above hers. She was too surprised and startled to move, and when he released her he stood gazing into her eyes with a faint smile. She smiled in return, and after a moment he took her hand and they started to dance.

After that they saw a good deal of each other. They loved the out-of-doors and he taught her to play golf. They would go out on a sunny afternoon, or a windless morning and play nine holes to 'perfect her technique,' as Miriam said. There were a few movies to be seen together, and some campus function almost every week-end. Because a girl was marked up as a fellow's "Hot Moment" if seen with him three times in succession, Ruth called it "heavy dating."

III

Then came the day of the fraternity picnic.

John looked at Miriam appreciatingly as she came down the steps in khaki hiking clothes and a saucy red tam. It was a breathless kind of spring day that made one want to forget there were such things as studies, and wander for miles down a dusty road.

"Top o' the morning, sir, she cried," Miriam called, running toward the car.

"Begorra, it is that, fer shure," he replied. "Hop in. Everybody's ready to start. We're going to Vee-dau-voo."

"Grand. I love it out there. Who're we hauling with us?"

"Ourselves," John answered. "We're exclusive. Besides, this car isn't full grown yet; it can't stand to be overworked."

"Okey. I'm ready. Let's go."

They joined the party, consisting of some dozen cars of every make and description. Just ahead of them was a fenderless Ford bug, with three people in the seat and two on the gas tank. They laughed all the way out at the mad search for hand-holds, which always came just after the bump was passed.

They reached the valley about ten o'clock and everyone started immediately to climb as if driven by a resistless force.

"Shall we do a mountain or two before time to eat?" John asked as he opened the car door.

"Yes." Miriam did not wait for him, but sprang out alone. "Let's take the highest one. We aren't cheap."

"Check. Be with you in a minute. Wait till I get my cigarettes and park this coat of mail."

He threw his leather jacket over the back of the seat and they started toward the southeastern slope of the mountain. The hill was slightly wooded near the foot and not too steep. They made rapid progress at first, but were soon above the trees, facing a high pile of huge boulders. The surface of the rocks was just rough enough to furnish a good grip for rubber soles. In many places she had to go on hands and knees or wait for him to go ahead and give her a pull. It was hard climbing and they had no breath for chatter.

"Say the word when you're tired," he said once when they reached the top of a twenty-foot ledge, "and we'll turn back."

Miriam stood up and drew a long breath.

"Hum, that was a stiff one. 'Fraid I'm not much of a Swiss mountaineer. But I have a dogged disposition; I don't like to start something I can't finish. I'm for going to the top."

"Sit down, then, and rest while I smoke a cigarette."

He made himself comfortable against the wall of the next ledge and invited her to join him. They sat quietly for about ten minutes, talking of the view and watching speck-like couples clambering up the opposite hills. Finally, Miriam got up and walked along the shelf to inspect a deep crack in the rock above them.

FIRST WEEKEND

by CHARLES HARDIN

James Booth rose early that morning, but not from force of habit, for he was a young man of irregular habits. On this particular day was initiated a very important segment of his life, his college career.

He dressed carefully and with a little feeling of superiority, feeling that he was perhaps a little different from the average college freshman. He wore suits; owned but one sweater, in fact. He could tie a bow knot himself. His black hair was a stranger to hair-oil. His diction was quite free from slang, if a little encumbered by not-too-well-understood big words. He had blue eyes and regular features. He was a little above average height and a good deal above normal weight. He had, also, a bad temper, a sense of tradition and school loyalty and a scholarship from a Wyoming High School.

He left the freshman dorm and strolled down the long walk past the imposing Engineering Hall and around to the front of Main, where he paused for a moment. As he looked at the noble facade of Old Main, it symbolized for him all the traditions that he was trying to worship that September morning. He found himself unable to gain the degree of adoration that he deemed necessary, and feeling a little ashamed, he climbed the steps.

As he started to open the door it was pushed roughly from the other side and Jack Rate bounded out, almost passing Booth without recognizing him.

"Hello, Rate."

"Oh, hello, Booth, old man, how they goin'? Coming to the Sig Alph house for dinner? Atta kid. Just drop in and make it home. See you later, old man."

He dashed away and James was left with a warm glow and not a little pride—quite a thing to be recognized by a senior. With his head up a little, he entered Main to look for the Registrar's office. Not seeing it on the first floor, he carefully avoided the directory and accosted a young man who appeared to be nearly his own age, who was hurrying down the hall.

"Pardon me," said James, "can you tell me where the Registrar's office is?"

"Downstairs at the end of the hall, that way," said the stranger.

James thought he recognized the man.

"Say, what did you think of the elections last night? You are a freshman, aren't you?"

"No," the stranger answered, flushing. "I am Caldwell of the political economy department."

"I beg your pardon," said James and backed hastily away and downstairs to the Registrar's hold-out.

"Is the Registrar busy?" he asked.

"Step into that office," said one of the window girls. "He isn't busy right now."

"Good morning, young man," said Registrar McKimily, admitting James.

"Good morning, Mr. McKimily. I registered as a freshman yesterday, but not having my High School certificate of scholarship with me, I was told to bring it to you today. Here it is."

"This looks regular enough, Mr. Booth," said McKimily, "I'll fix it up for you." He wrote a few lines on a card. "Take this to the Secretary's office."

"Thank you, sir. Good-day."

"Good morning."

James stepped out of the office and out into the sunshine. Behind him McKimily picked up the desk phone and called 2701.

"Hello, is McGrew there? There's a boy at the dorm named James Booth, John. He has a scholarship from Newcastle. His family has been in the state for forty years. His cousin was here in 1923 but don't suppose that makes any difference. I met his father in 1917. He was a member of the legislature, and so on . . ."

In a few minutes the Sigma Nu riot squad picked James Booth up at the Men's dorm and took him for a ride and pressed dinner invitations on him. At last they let him out at the campus shop, where he ran into Kimberling of the Delta Kappa Sigma fraternity.

"We're doub'e dating tonight, aren't we, James? What are you doing now?"

"Nothing in particular, but I'm going to the A. T. O. house for lunch and the Sig Alpha house for dinner. I think I'll go to the dorm now. See you later, Kim."

Kim watched him leave and another freshman tear out after him and catch up.

"Hey, Booth, let's slip down to the Kappa Sig house for a few minutes."

"I haven't been invited," began James.

"Sure you have. I'm asking you."

"Have you a ride?"

"Yep."

"I'll go, then."

Behind them in the campus shop Kimberling chuckled softly and in another corner Mr. Bunstart and some of the other members of the Independent Club were talking.

"Do you know this Booth?"

"No, but he seems to be getting a big rush. We ought to do something."

"Yep, can't afford to overlook a bet."

At the Kappa Sig house they were greeted by Mr. Regupple and others.

"Booth?" said Mr. Regupple. "Glad to know you, Mr. Booth. Won't you sit down?"

Mr. Booth sat down and was talked to. Yes, he was going out for freshman football. No, he wasn't connected with the actor, Booth—at least, not that he knew of. Yes, he planned to stay for five years and take law.

At this admission all the brothers pricked up their ears and started in seriously.

Mr. Regupple went over and sat on the chair arm.

"Pardon me, but that is a DeMolay pin, is it not?"

"Yes," said James, "I've been a member for about two years now."

"I was a member—nice organization. Of course, it's really a club. Now a fraternity . . . but the two are so different one can't compare them. But it certainly means a lot to belong to either one. Of course, a fraternity . . ."

And so on until the Alpha Taus came and literally dragged James off to lunch. [Continued on page 21]

Jim: "What kind of an ear has an engine got?"

Mabel: "Dunno—"

Jim: "An Engineer, of course!"

Leonide R.: "Don't you love driving on a night like this?"

John T.: "Yeah, but I thought I'd wait until we got farther out in the country."

Jack Thompson: "I got a hunch."

Dot: "Really, I thought you were just round shouldered."

She was only a boxer's daughter, but she was certainly a knockout.

"I shall die," throbbed Jim Humphries, unless you consent to marry me."

"I'm sorry," said Margaret kindly but firmly, "but I will not marry you."

So Jim went back to Boston, and after eating beans for sixty-two years, three months and a day, became suddenly ill and died.

Rodney Guthrie: "This book will do half of your studying for you."

Jack Frost: "Give me two of them quick."

Life is just one fool thing after another; love is just two fool things after one another.

The afternoon passed in like fashion but this time the boys on tenth street had to remove Booth forcibly from the den of the snakes in order to take him to dinner.

After dinner there was a dance at the Little Theatre, to which James was going to take Paula Mansfield. Kimberling had introduced them and arranged the date. He said that Paula was one of the best girls on the campus and James admitted that she certainly looked the part.

He called for her at Hoyt Hall and they drove to the dance with Kim and his date. Of course, it was only a block to the Little Theatre, but one never can tell, there might be a cloudburst or something.

Paula had on a very green dress, cut severely and hanging as low as her ankles. It had no sleeves, of course, and very little back and Paula has particularly white arms and, as everyone knows, her hair, so very blonde, would look like flying wisps of gold or shattered bits of sunbeams or the like, in that green setting—it did.

All she had to do was to be so beautiful. But she talked, too, and her voice changed ever so slightly but always was musical. She called him James. Everyone did. He had such a curious personality, one felt that he was very wise and aloof yet very untaught about the ways of colleges. But he knew something of the ways of the world and especially of the world of women. He listened to her blase comments. He smiled gravely at her gay witticisms but he chose to remain enigmatical until at last he said:

"Lord, Paula, it's a treat to be natural. I've been 'Mistered' to death lately and have had to be so attentive and meeting so many people . . . I'll be glad to get settled down."

Someone touched his shoulder.

"Pardon me, Mr. Booth, but I must dance with Paula." It was J. Lord of the A. T. O.'s who spoke. He took Paula away and they glided off.

Lord said to Paula: "What are you doing tomorrow night—a date?—and the next?"

"Nothing," Paula said.

"That's Sunday. I'd certainly like to have a date. Right?"

"Yes, I'd be glad to, but remind me Sunday, will you?"

"Thanks and listen, Paula, if you can do anything with young Booth—if you have any influence—put in a word for the Alpha Taus, will you?"

"Do you think it would be a good idea?"

"I should say I do. Will you?"

"Maybe," she caught sight of her escort and beckoned him with her eyes and her hand. He cut in.

"Thanks very much," said Lord. Having a nice time?"

"Oh, a very nice time, thank you."

"Do you like the Alpha Taus?" asked Paula as they danced away.

"I like them all," James said wearily.
"But Lord, that's all I hear—fraternity—"

"Such popularity must be richly deserved."

"Pardon me, Paula, it's not popularity exactly. And if it were, it isn't nearly so important as you are right now."

"That was nice. Do you want to go on a picnic tomorrow? Of course, it's out of the way for a girl to suggest something like that. But we could get Kim and Madge and get away from this sort of thing. I say, this is peculiar, my asking you."

"It's very enjoyable," said James.

"And I was afraid to ask you, never getting any encouragement until just now. But I thought you probably do not know the ropes yet."

"I think it is a splendid idea and I'm very glad you saw your way clear to—well—broach the subject."

The upshot of the conversation was a trip to the hills the next day. Kim Kimberling and a little black-haired Pi Phi named Madge, and Paula, who was as delectable in riding clothes as in an evening gown, and lastly, James Booth.

They drove out Ninth street and headed for the Indian caves. Madge broke the silence:

"We got the cake and the buns and everything but the steak, I guess. Did you get the pop, Kim?"

"Yep, got a whole case."

"Why pop?" asked James.

"The water's so damn bad out there explained Kim.

James smiled, if he had been a Frenchman he would have raised his eyebrows.

The picnic started with a bang, its planning had been left to Kim and his mind's chief forte is organization. The party was well organized.

First, they had lunch, juicy steaks on toasted buns, pickles, lettuce and so on,
and all washed down with pop, but before long the steaks were all gone and there was plenty of pop left. The four sat around and consumed it, draping themselves on rocks in the approved picnic attitudes and making the usual wise cracks of outing parties.

Presently, as so often happens, the walls started closing in and the little nook grew smaller, only one escape was open to the party; one couple had to leave while there was still time. In consequence, Paula suggested that she and James should explore around a bit in hopes of finding a cave or a bird's nest or perhaps an eagle rock. They got up to leave.

"If you want us, fire two shots in quick succession."

"That would bring you, all right, said Kim. "Shall we fire one now for practice"

A little later Paula and James were hurrying over the rocks. Soon tired, they stopped for breath and threw themselves on a little patch of grass and lay back watching the big clouds go drifting around in the sky.

Paula turned to James.

"Are you going up?" she called.

"All aboard for heaven," he replied. "When do we start, and where?"

"Here," she said, "and now. What'll yuo bet I can't make this one alone?"

It took them over an hour to reach the top. The boulders grew steadily larger and more difficult; there always seemed to be just one more farther ahead that was higher. When at last they stood before the very highest one it appeared formidable and dangerous. It was about twenty-five feet high, steep, and smooth-surfaced.

"Better not try it," John advised. "It looks bad. Let's call this good."

"Oh, but we're so near the top," Miriam exclaimed. "I couldn't bear to stop now."

"Well, if that's the way you feel, you'd better go up on the other side. It's not so steep, and there's a tiny shelf you can use for foot-holds if you're careful."

Miriam worked her way painstakingly around the rock; she could see it was really two rocks—one smaller boulder nestling close to the shoulder of the big one. Once her foot slipped and she looked below; she was on the steep side of the mountain, about eighty feet straight above the treetops. Her heart froze cold in terror and she had to stop a minute to concentrate on her control. She forced herself to look at the rock in front of her and inspect it closely. John came up behind her.

"What's the matter? Stuck?"

"No. Just wondering which is the best way to take."

"Try it straight ahead, and a little to the left," he advised.

Miriam half turned and placed her right foot forward. About two yards ahead there was a flat ledge large enough to stand on; from there it was an easy rise to the top. But between her and the ledge was a smooth wall of rock. She made a quick adjustment of her weight and started to run across it, thinking it would be best to go quickly. Her foot slipped and she lost her balance; a moment later she was caught between the two rocks, hanging by the left knee.

It took John fifteen minutes to get her down to the foot of the rock.

"Can you stand up?" he asked.

"I'm afraid not. The knee seems to be out of joint or something."

"Let's have a look at it." He took hold of her ankle and lifted it easily. "This may hurt a little," he cautioned, "but it's necessary. You look across yonder and see if anybody is coming up the hill."

She caught her breath quickly when he jerked her foot upward and popped the knee back in place.

"Well, anyway, I'd rather be hanging between two rocks by the knee cap than perched down there on one of those treetops—a mangled and ugly mass," she remarked.

"Gee, you're a plucky kid," John said admiringly, "but I've got to figure out some way to get you down from here."

IV

Late that afternoon when Miriam limped into her room a diamond-shaped pin glistened on her blue sweater. Ruth was bending over her fishbowl talking to Izzy and Oscar—her two tiny pet turtles.

"Anybody who can love a turtle can love anything," Miriam greeted.

Ruth looked up and saw the pin immediately. She went off into an ecstasy of excitement.

"Why Miriam Sparks!" she demanded. "What is that? Darlin' tell me all about it. You precious! You're wearing John's frat pin."

"What if I am? Haven't you ever seen one before? Besides, if you were good for anything at all you'd see that I'm crippled, and help me take care of this bad knee."

"What happened, darlin'?" Did you fall and get hurt?" Ruth was solicitous, but her eyes still wandered to the emblem above Miriam's heart.

"No," Miriam answered wryly. "I was trying out a new method of high-vaulting and cracked my knee against a star. Unlace my boot, won't you?"

"You poor dear. I'll put hot cloths and a bandage on. That'll keep the swelling down." Ruth was all sympathy and worked industriously for the next few minutes making Miriam comfortable.

"Now, how does it feel? Comfy?"

"Great." Miriam sighed. "Thanks loads. You're an angel, honey."

"Well, if you feel better I'm not going to wait another minute for an explanation." She reached across and touched a black enameled surface of the pin. "What does this mean?"

Miriam looked at it dreamily.

"What does it usually mean when a girl wears a fellow's pin?" she inquired. "You ought to know, you've worn enough of 'em yourself."

"Yes, but you're different," Ruth protested. "I never expected to see you flaunting one. You're too serious. Besides, what about the motility patterns and your ambitions?"

Miriam leaned forward and patted Ruth lightly on the cheek.

"You're as stupid as a bumblebee, sweetheart," she said. "Can't you see? I've decided I'd rather be happy than famous."

Slim: "The house is pinched."

Slip: "Let's run and get a seat in the wagon!"

See See Russell: "I've a notion to settle down and go in for raising chickens."

Joe Porter: "Better try owls. Their hours would suit you better."

Esther Downer: "How come you are so round-shouldered, Addie?"

Addie Brown: "I've been writing with a heavy lead pencil."

COED BALL

PREFACE

There are some whose only glee
Consists in studying diligently;
Their biggest date is Bill Shakespeare,
Their only joy ride, Paul Revere.

Not so with us.

In week-ends gay, our pleasure lies,
We are the social butterflies!

SOCIETY

The girls started things, as usual, with the Coed Ball, at the Little Theatre. Each freshman girl was accompanied by an old student, dressed in the latest male fashions. A swell time was had by all, including Bob Bates and Jack Frost, charmingly arrayed in flowing skirts.

Then the campus went back to nature, so to speak, and journeyed out to the Barn for the Ag Dance. The girls, garbed in gingham, shrieked coyly as they started up the steep stairs to the dance floor, and enjoyed themselves just as thoroughly, gayly falling off piles of darling hay. Cider and doughnuts—a good party, everybody held up at the crossing by a train evidently ignorant of Dorm rules. Everybody left after this whoopee party for Denver and the game.

Homecoming! Came the alumni—in hordes, brimming over with pep and love for dear old Alma Mammy. The Homecoming dance, in the Big Gym, was a success.

The Engineers gave their ball in the Big Gym, too, the decorations quite dazzling and engineeric! Mabel Hanson made a very pretty Queen, with Polly Agnew and Molly Peacock the Maids of Honor.

The Wyo Ball, given by the 1930 Wyo Staff, was the occasion for the announcement of the winners of the Beauty Contest. Helen Hylton was crowned as Wyoming's most beautiful coed in a very impressive ceremony. She was presented a gorgeous bouquet of roses by the two cunning little flower girls, and was crowned by Zita Miller, last year's queen. Polly Agnew was the winner of second place, and Carol Corbin, third.

ENGINEERS' BALL

HOME-COMING DANCE

The seniors showed their talent as providers of big entertainment and gave their annual Black and White, at the Little Theatre. It was a very good party, despite the staid dignity of them Seniors!

But at last came the long-awaited Junior Prom! Gray's Gables was decked out in its best for the occasion. Black and white streamers shivered down from the ceiling, and beautiful dresses of all colors and sorts made a maze of loveliness. The throne, all shimmering silver, received its queen, Miss Lillian England, regal and lovely in white. Miss Margaret Blake and Miss Iva Mae McKenzie were pretty maids of honor. Entertainment was given for the Queen, and the party went on to a splendid close. Best prom ever given, undoubtedly!

The Sophomores hung a blue cloth over the Little Theatre to make it very mysterious, and pulled off the Iron Skull Skid, bringing to a close the major social activities of the year.

Sadly another week-end passes,
 Sadly we wander back to classes.
 In week-ends gay, our pleasure lies,
 We are those social butterflies!

SUCCESS

The operation for the rejuvenation of youth has been performed on the seventy-year-old patient. As he comes from under the influence of the ether, he begins to weep bitterly.

A kind-faced nurse bends over him. "Don't be distressed," she says comfortingly. "The operation is a complete success in every detail. When you leave here you'll be feeling ever so many years younger."

But the old man only continues to wail, the tears rolling down his cheeks and losing themselves in his white whiskers.

"Don't cry," pleads the nurse. "The pain you feel now will soon pass away."

"I'm not crying because of the pain," explains the disconsolate one between his racking sobs. "I'm afraid I'll be late to school."

—Northwestern Purple Parrot.

Son: "Ma, what's the idea of makin' me sleep up here every night?"

Mother: "Hush, Bobby, you only have to sleep on the mantlepiece two more weeks and then your picture will be in a Believe-it-or-Not cartoon."

—Colgate Banter.

Shoeman: "Well, here are your shoes all soled. Where's the money?"

Scotchman: "Yes, where is it? Your sign says, 'Shoes soled while you wait for one dollar.' I'm still waiting for that dollar."

"My boy, you certainly have a way with women."

"Do you mean that?"

"I do. You're so clean and polite—you know, so many men think that all they have to do is to throw a frail over de shoulder and make off wid her. Why, you should hear the way some of the fellows swear around girls."

"They shouldn't do that. It's such bad form."

"I'm awfully interested in you," Paula said slowly, "you are sort of like—" she caught herself.

"Yes?"

"Never mind. But do be careful in picking a fraternity—won't you? You like the Alpha Taus, don't you?"

"Yes, of course."

"Well, they aren't your sort, and it means so much to get in with your own kind. And don't have anything to do with the Kappa Sigs. Why, just last spring—but never mind that—and as for the I. C.'s, and D. M. A.'s—" "How about the Sigma Nus," asked James.

"Why don't you go to Vassar and be done with it? And the Sig Alphas are a bunch of odiferous athletes—if you'll pardon my crudity . . ."

"But," she went on, "the Delta Kappa Sigmas are different. They are the best dressed men on the campus and they are gentlemen—refined, educated. Scholarship is their aim—and they achieve culture, and then there is a certain charm about them; of course, they are the oldest here—and I wish you'd join them, James."

"I believe I will," said James reflectively.

"Let me thank you."

"Go ahead."

"Come here," said Paula.

James Booth, in company with the other newly pledged neophytes of Delta Kappa Sigma, was waiting in all expectancy, the first meeting called by the King of Frosh.

James was proud of his pledge pin and the things it stood for, and was eager to prove his worth to the fraternity. When the "King" was heard coming in, James made one last vow to be a model fraternity man.

Enter the King, dressed in an old sweat shirt and dirty cords. The room hushed.

"All right, you guys," said the King. "Just one word before we get down to business. I don't want to see much dating—understand? And don't form any cliques, and above all, don't try to be familiar with the actives—now how many of you are going out for frosh football?"

NAPOLEON

It was yet early morn. Dawn had cracked scarcely fifteen minutes ago, yet the general was up, and already about matters of state. With slow and measured steps he paced back and forth, ponderously, turning great thoughts over in his mind. His countenance, this morning, looked gaunt and haggard, carved with furrows that worries and cares had left there. He paced back and forth, up and down, his head bent. Into his eyes there came a grim look—for he knew, surely he knew it, that today, death and ruin were awaiting him. Some shadow of his awful future had come to him. Doom stalked on two huge feet. He turned, bravely, quietly, to face his ruin. All around him his loyal subjects slept, not dreaming of his dreadful fate. Alone he faced capture.

His awful doom bent over him, seemed to clutch his collar—stifled him—and then he was thrown in a dreadful vehicle—a general, an emperor, mighty of the mighty, thrown into the midst of a crowd of fighting, screaming, howling victims like himself—common trash. His noble blood curdled. He cringed. Then to the prison, and confinement. A dark and gloomy day of harrowing thoughts, bleak loneliness, and certain death awaited him. Would not his beloved subjects learn of his capture and come to save him? Should he never see again the lands of his heart's desire—the palace grounds—his loyal people? Great melancholy weighed over him—he sank down in a crumpled heap, hid his head and wept!

Then night approached, and horror with it. He saw a huge form drawing near—nearer. Was he going to be taken to his death? Tremendous hands opened his cell, dragged him out, led him—kindly—and then, through tear-dimmed eyes the emperor saw, and was glad. It was the emperor's counsellor of first rank in his court, the faithful, trusted Crane. Joyfully the emperor licked his face, kissed him. Napoleon had met and conquered his Waterloo—he was on his way home. Now, he could sit and sun in front of the Royal Library, no longer a haunted exile. For he was crowned, officially, with a high and most worthy license. Long live the emperor! Down with the Dog Catcher!

Campus hopology--

(Course Omitted From Catalogue)

Advanced course in conversation will be in charge, this year, of an imported professor, Nebraska brand, Dr. Clifford Lester. Bring a dictionary, a polite smile and a dime to pay for your own coc, girls.

A new absence ruling has been put through by the head of the department, Prof. Dimmit, C.C., and is being strictly and rigidly enforced. If you cut twice a day your usual seat will be taken and you will have to sit in the stalls in the middle. This, of course, requires the freshman course in nonchalance.

Advanced students in military may wear their uniforms to class, provided they do not create too much disturbance, or stumble over saber.

Faculty members are welcome. The Law Department has moved to the spacious chambers of the Campus hopology department, where the light and airy atmosphere helps to solve the most puzzling case.

A new course being instituted this year should prove very interesting, the only prerequisite being a good breath control. Instruction given to girls on how to swallow a mouthful of smoke upon the entrance of Dean Dunnewald.

Honor graduates--in this course, Fred Dawson, Hermione Bradstreet, George David Herrick, Joe Collidge and the Hon. Charles Coughlin.

College Fames

We nominate to our 1929-30 collegiate hall of fame:

Arthur "Arty" Peterson, because he is a Swede. Because there is a big discussion as to whether the instrument he plays is a baritone horn or a cross between a bass horn and a flute. We hear he hypnotizes it to make it that way;

Dr. Grace Raymond Hebard, because—well, all we know is what we read in the newspapers, and judging from them, she still holds the record for dedicating monuments;

Arthur Edmonson Oeland, because he is a senior in the Law School, president of the Potter Law Club, and well-known connoiseur of collegiate cafes, and is famous for his filing of breach of promise suits for the recovery of money and reputation only;

Hap Harold Horatio Hanes, because he is a long-time Wyo student, many times secret sorrow, first owner of "Hap's Hash House," technical expert in the school of commerce, and will graduate this year, the faculty and the gods being willing;

Joseph George Porter, because he believes in the old Hawaiian custom, "Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we may be dead, and then where are you?"

Virginia Clara Campbell, because we have heard that it pays to "try a Camel" and because she doesn't use toothpaste—her teeth aren't loose;

Duncan Lawrence King, because when he took the blindfold test he mistook coffee for his favorite brand of cigarettes and because what he doesn't know about Martha, Walt Kingham thinks he does;

Sarah Lucille Love, because she is of-times winner of beauty contests and is the most consistent dater on the campus (?). Because no one ever asks Lucille the question, "A penny for your thoughts";

Dr. Samuel Howell Knight, because he is head of the Geology Department and grows a fine black moustache. He conducts a class in comparative anatomy and concentrated wrestling each spring under the complicated title of Field Geology;

John Paul Scott, because being free, white and twenty-one, he is now a Rhodes scholar;

Alice Ellen Ford, because she is a debater and how! Like many other fords, she rattles right along;

Joseph Francis Replogle, because a yellow roadster is his favorite toy, and Peggy is his favorite playmate;

Elizabeth Dolan, because the student body is planning to celebrate when she utters her second word. She said her first when a shot-put was dropped on her foot. Her word then was "Gee";

Margaret Louise Blake, because she simply adores basketball players when they walk, talk, and play, and really are Johnny Engstrom;

William Henry O'Donnell, because as a chairman he makes a good train caller. Because of all presidents, he is not only the best but also the worst. He is running Elmer Modeer a race for a comprehensive knowledge of the procedure of deliberative organizations.

CHEER LEADERS

Came the great moment, the crowd holds its breath, the team holds its line, the officials hold a conference—all is ready. Suddenly with a frightful roar two yellow and brown figures flash into action. Who are they? Oh, they're off! Off? Yes, off the ground! At least a foot, no, both—and they won't come down to earth until after the game. Who are they? Why, our cheerleaders!

—Bertha Ashley.

Tri: "I see that you have a new frat pin, but why are you wearing it on the right side?"

Delt: "Oh, that's just to signify a change of heart."

* * *

Cal Owen: What a bump Dot has on her ankle. She must have been hurt.

Don Harkins: That's not a bump—that's just the price of the movies that slipped.

* * *

D. M. A.: Stop, my friend! Do you believe that a glass of that vile stuff will quench your thirst?

K. S.: Nope. I'm gonna drink the whole jug.

* * *

Coed (watching love scene in talkie): Why don't you make love to me that way?

He: Say, do you know the salary he gets for doing that?

"Have you read 'To a Skylark'?"
"I tried to once, but it flew away."

Pemberton: "Why didn't you answer my letter?"

Kath. H.: "I didn't get it."

Pemberton: "You didn't get it?"

Kath. H.: "No, and besides, I didn't like some of the things you said in it."

Alice: Can you do any of the old-fashioned dances?

Mae Irene: I think I remember the Charleston!

* * *

Dumb! Why that woman is so dumb she thinks a veterinary is a place where they keep veterans.

LIFE

Let me live my life from year to year
 With forward face and unreluctant soul;
 Not hurrying to or turning from the goal,
 Not mourning for the things that disappear
 In the dim past, nor holding back in fear
 From what the future veils; but with a whole
 And happy heart, that pays its toll
 To Youth and Age, and travels on with cheer.

EYES RIGHT

A very well-dressed and pretty girl applied for a position as a typist to a business house.

"Where were you last employed?" asked the senior partner of the firm.

"In a doll factory," the girl replied.

"And what were your duties?"

"I was making eyes for three years," she coyly answered.

The senior partner gazed thoughtfully at the girl.

"All right, you're engaged," he said after a while. And then, dropping his voice somewhat, he added: "By the way, don't demonstrate your abilities while my wife is in the office."

McCOY'S HOBBY

Horses! Horses! Horses! (Frozen Horses.)

"We are now passing the most famous brewery in London," explained the guide.

"We are not," replied Jim McCoy as he hopped off the motor bus.

NATURE'S LAUNDRY

Judge: "What weapon did you use to inflict these injuries?"

Pat (proudly): "None, yer Honor. It was all hand work."

Bob H.: "She's a very nicely reared girl, don't you think?"

Oscar N.: "Yeah. She don't look so bad from in front, either."

The absent-minded professor went out to lunch and left pinned to his door a card which read, "Profesor X will be back at 1:00 p. m." Returning at 12:30, he read the notice, looked at his watch and sat down to wait for himself to return.

A.T.O.: "You simply cannot find a cook who is honest. The one you recommended just left suddenly and took with her nine of our towels."

K.S.: "What kind were they?"

A.T.O.: "They were those Pullman towels which we brought back from our last football trip."

BIT BY BIT

An American and an Irishman, music hall artists, were telling the tale.

"I was a whooping success from my first appearance," volunteered the American. "On that occasion I received sufficient flowers to start the wife in a florist's shop."

"Well," said the Irishman, "I can beat that. On my first appearance the audience were so overcome that they presented me with a house."

"Oh, applesauce," jeered the other. "I don't believe they gave you a house."

"They really did. A brick at a time, of course."

He: "You look sweet enough to eat."

She: "I do eat. Where shall we go?"

Tardy Plumber: "Well, here I am; and how's things?"

Optomistic Householder: (Three feet deep in water): "Oh, not so bad. While I've been waiting for you I've taught the wife to swim."

M. Mathis: "What sort of a driver is Bob."

B. Nimmo: "Oh, the sort of idiot who requires two hands to steer."

"What are your views on kissing?"

"I have none. I always shut my eyes."

Just another reason why the Freshmen miss classes during the spring quarter.

Furrier: "This coat is genuine skunk fur."

Fussy: "Will rain spoil it?"

Furrier: "Did you ever hear of a skunk carrying an umbrella?"

Schoolteacher: Who was the most beloved girl in all France?

John: Mademoiselle from Armentieres.

HEARD AT AGUA CALIENTE

Since my girl started wearing long skirts I discovered she had blue eyes.— I tried creme de menthe with my broccoli, but it's no good—If women only knew it, the longer length dresses show off all figures to better advantage than do the short ones—Nothing is more wonderful than the love of a good woman—unless, of course, it's the love of a bad woman—Yes, I just had to buy that $225.00 frock to match my new earrings—(Which reminds me that I ought to get a new car for my trick windshield wiper).

And the drunk whose telephone tolls from Mexico to Hollywood runs into real money. When he gets his friend he says: "Who do you want to talk to?" "I didn't call you; you called here," is invariably the sleepy indignant reply, to which the reveler snaps back, "No, you called me!" Whereupon he hangs up and falls to the floor in a fit of laughter. —But the biggest kick of all is to stay over in Mexico until Monday, then watch the huge truck lumber away with all the ginger ale bottles. If you're interested in the Nob'e Experiment, it is a very impressive spectacle.

"Prisoner at the bar," said the Texas judge, "this case of yours plumb beats me. You said you wanted to bring your own lawyers from your home town and nary a lawyer has turned up. The jury, most of them strangers to me, have found you not guilty, although thirty-seven men, two women and a stranger saw you plug Red Pete. Now that jury is supposed to know its own business, so you're acquitted. But what about those lawyers?"

"Well, judge," said the prisoner, "I guess I'll be gettin' along now. The boys will be waiting for me. There was six lawyers, and they was all on the jury."

A TIMELY ANSWER

Mrs. Stone, the very suburban housewife, had just engaged a new maid.

Before explaining the duties to the girl she thought she would first inquire into her family.

"By the way, I will, of course, require your name," said the housewife.

"Yes ma'am," returned the girl. "My name's Miss Parsons."

"But you don't expect me to call you Miss Parsons?" went on the mistress.

"Certainly not, ma'am," put in the new maid hastily. "I have an alarm clock."

PLAY ROULETTE?

That old French custom, roulette, seems to have found a new lease on life among the sill sex (which means both) and they tell us that the roulette wheel manufacturers are working night and day turning out the little mahogany wheel-gadgets, and that inasmuch as they use dried peas for the ball, the dried pea growers are close to hysteria with the new demand.

Then of course the green felt makers haven't felt so prosperous for years—not since billiards were the nation's curse. But to get back to roulette—ummm—what fun!

We'd played a little, but the bug seems to be stronger than ever this year, and what a game we stumbled into the other night! Of course the best thing about roulette is that there are so many things to bet on—everything but the color of your girl-friend's watchamacallets. There's a book of rules with every set, and you can go as far as you like on the cost of said outfit.

But don't forget to save enough dough to buy pull-enty of ha-ha-aqua, for without stimulation you'll probably faint the first time you play your pile and get only a pleasant smile from the banker as he rakes it in.

You don't have to think to play this delightful game—you don't even have to see. Just push a pile of chips somewhere on the felt and let Lady Luck take her course.

Red hot bulletins from the snootier colleges say that this popular sport threatens to push old lady Ping Pong out the back window. And just when we were getting good at that net and ball racket!

FOR THE COTTAGE PONEY-GRAPH

"There's Danger in Your Eyes, Cherie" is swell, unless you forget and say "cinders" instead of "danger"—then the effect is lost. And, before we forget it (as if we would!) don't fail to buy four or five hundred copies of "So Beats My Heart For You"—(we get a rake-off). On the level, chillins, it's bee-utiful, and the theme song of "Rah, Rah, Daze."

If you like sentiment with your beer, gargle a coupla choruses, of "A Cottage For Sale" which is a honey for 3 a. m. sob singing. And speaking of drinking songs, doesn't it beat old Andy Volstead how popular the Maine Stein Song has become? Rudy Vallee started it all, and now the country is as flooded with drinking songs as it is with drinkers—which is some flood.

Left—A chick outfit, to be worn by certain coeds on certain days. (Bows on ankles are detachable.)

Right—The proper thing for the classroom. (The hand can be worn in or out of the pocket, according to the personality.)

Above—One of the new silhouettes exquisitely made of moire, organdie, or muslin, with matching handkerchief of cheesecloth. This handy cigarette holder may be changed into a compact at a moment's notice.

Down—An appropriate costume for activities in the Campus Shop. Frat pin may be worn inside or out.

Below—A suit to be worn while playing golf on Prexy's pasture. Don't forget the downcast eyes, and "Follow through."

WHEN IN CHEYENNE

Client: "She has been saying the most dreadful things about my face."

Lawyer: "Yes, yes, I know. But I don't advise you to sue. It would cost you more than the whole thing's worth."

Officer Neal: "You are exceeding the speed limit, miss. Your name please."

Marian I.: "But officer, you can't arrest me. This isn't my car and I haven't a license to drive."

Jack: "I hate to play cards with a bad loser."

Joe: "Oh, I don't know. It's better than playing with an habitual winner."

Lawyer: "Yes, yes, I know. But I don't advise you to sue. It would cost more than playing with an habitual winner."

Mask and Sandal Member: "Oh why was I born an actress?"

Mrs. DeKay: "You weren't."

"Why do girls kiss each other."
"Just to keep in practice, I guess."

If you don't think coeds are wonderful, you eds just try kissing some of the burly football players on the campus. There's been a girl that has kissed each and every one of them."

Gene Cross: "I really don't see what the Ten Commandments are for. They don't tell you what to do, and only put ideas into your head."

Prof. and Mrs. Berry were announced by the butler at the President's reception thusly: "The Berries."

L. Pemberton: "When you told your father that I didn't smoke, drink, gamble or swear, what did he say?"

K. Howell: "Oh, he said that he didn't want me to marry a perfect man, but that you were such a good liar he thought you would do."

Then there was the drunk who, after seeing an all talkie picture, went around to the stage door to see the chorus girls come out.

Broadmindedness is the ability to smile when you learn that the ten bucks you lent your roommate is taking your girl to the prom.

Money may not buy every woman, but it gives a larger variety to choose from.

"What did she say when you kissed her?"
"Not a word. Do you think she is a ventriloquist?"

Eat, drink, and be wary, for it may not be rye.

Then there is the frosh who, after buying a raccoon coat, a broken down Ford covered with smart cracks, a slicker ditto, a saxophone, a ukelele and several pairs of red and green suspenders, died of a broken heart because everyone thought he went to high school.

Art O.: "I feel like a nice, cool malted milk. How about?"

Dot W.: "I dunno. What's a malted milk feel like?"

MONEY SPENT WITH HOME-OWNED STORES STAYS AT HOME

The art of printing has advanced so rapidly in this country that we're turning out just as good pre-war Scotch labels today as Scotland did before the war.

Four-wheel brakes have improved traffic conditions so much that a pedestrian can now be picked up before the tenth car has run over him.

He (on telephone): "Hello, darling, would you like to have dinner with me tonight?"

She: "I'd love to dear."

He: "Well, tell your mother I'll be over at seven."

That swell looking girl may be dead from her shoulders up, but she can bury her head in my arms any time she pleases.

D. M. A. coming home late: "I just can't make this key fit the lock."

Other D. M. A.: "That isn't a key, it's a cigar."

First D. M. A.: "Gee, I must have smoked the key then."

PROFESSOR: "If the moon is two million miles away, how long will it take an aeroplane traveling at 100 miles an hour to reach it."

MODERN YOUTH: "How much gasoline did it start with."

"That girl over there shows distinction in her clothes."

"You mean distinctly, don't you."

"What did prexy say after he refused that drink at home coming."

"No thanks, Gene. I've got to have full control of my faculties at all times."

SHE: "Oh, go and commit suicide."

HE: "That's the last thing I'd do."

OUT OF TOWN ORDERS A SPECIALTY

LAND'S END

THE nights are very calm and still;
No human sound can ever fill
 Unmeasured space.
I cannot keep from looking for
The shadow edge of some small door
 Into another place.

The door which leads to winding stairs
And naked maidens saying prayers
 For those who come,
And to a garden redolent
With roses. Sleepy with the scent
 The crickets hum.

There maidens only dress in smiles,
For those who come a thousand miles
 Might pass them by.
And so they watch the petals blow
And, whirling round the fountains, go
 To find the sky.

Some night I'll wander through the door,
Where rose leaves rustle on the floor
 And hide the wall.
And off behind a marble chair
I'll find you, looking very fair
 And slim and tall.

At moonrise, then, I'll walk right through
That door and find the part of you
 I knew before.
And through it may be that I'll see
The thing I'd like to have you be,
 I'll want you more.

The days are full of somber dreams,
So real at times it almost seems
 That you're away.

—Paul Scott.
